

Enforcing Immigration Law: The Role of State and Local Law Enforcement

Lisa M. Seghetti

Section Research Manager

Karma Ester

Information Research Specialist

Michael John Garcia

Legislative Attorney

March 11, 2009

Congressional Research Service

7-5700

www.crs.gov

RL32270

CRS Report for Congress

Prepared for Members and Committees of Congress

AILA InfoNet Doc. No. 09042867. (Posted 04/28/09)

Summary

Since the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks, the enforcement of our nation's immigration laws has received a significant amount of attention. Some observers contend that the federal government does not have adequate resources to enforce immigration law and that state and local law enforcement entities should be utilized. Others, however, question what role state and local law enforcement agencies should have in light of limited state and local resources and immigration expertise.

Congress defined our nation's immigration laws in the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA), which contains both criminal and civil enforcement measures. Historically, the authority for state and local law enforcement officials to enforce immigration law has been construed to be limited to certain criminal provisions of the INA that also fall under state and local jurisdictions; by contrast, the enforcement of the civil provisions, which includes apprehension and removal of deportable aliens, has strictly been viewed as a federal responsibility, with states playing an incidental supporting role. In previous Congresses, several proposals had been set forth that would appear to expand the role of state and local law enforcement agencies in the civil enforcement aspects of the INA.

Congress, through various amendments to the INA, has gradually broadened the authority for state and local law enforcement officials to enforce immigration law, and some recent statutes have begun to carve out possible state roles in the enforcement of civil matters. Indeed, several jurisdictions have signed agreements (INA §287(g)) with the federal government to allow their respective state and local law enforcement agencies to perform new, limited duties relating to immigration law enforcement. Still, the enforcement of immigration laws by state and local officials has sparked debate among many who question what the proper role of state and local law enforcement officials should be in enforcing such laws. For example, many have expressed concern over proper training, finite resources at the local level, possible civil rights violations, and the overall impact on communities. Some communities have taken steps to define or limit the involvement of local authorities in the implementation of immigration law.

This report examines some of the policy and legal issues that may accompany an increased role of state and local law officials in the enforcement of immigration law. It will be updated as warranted.

Contents

Introduction	1
Background	1
Criminal Alien Program	2
National Fugitive Operations and Absconder Apprehension Initiatives	2
Current Practices	3
Authorities to Enforce Immigration Law	3
State Involvement in the Enforcement of Immigration Law	5
Office of Legal Counsel Opinions	6
Case Law	8
Express Authorization for State and Local Law Enforcement Officers to Enforce Immigration Law	11
Current Efforts	14
Florida’s Memorandum of Understanding	15
Background	15
Training	15
Complaint Procedures	16
Program Evaluation	16
Alabama’s Memorandum of Understanding	16
Background and Training	16
Jail-Based MOAs	17
Los Angeles County Sheriff’s Department MOA	17
Arizona’s MOA	17
Complaint Procedures	18
Commonalities in the MOAs	18
Total Number of Law Enforcement Officers Trained	18
Selected Issues	18
State and Local Policies Regarding Immigration Enforcement	18
Access to Database	19
Civil Rights	20
Detention Space	21
Pro/Con Analysis of State and Local Law Enforcement Officials Enforcing Immigration Law	21
Impact on Communities	21
Resources	22
National Security	22
Training	22
Possible Policy Approaches	23
Direct Access to Databases	23
Funding for State Cooperation	23
Criminalizing Civil Immigration Violations	24

Appendixes

Appendix A. List of Law Enforcement Entities Participating in 287(g) Program.....	25
Appendix B. Legislation in the 110 th Congress	27
Appendix C. Legislation in the 109 th Congress	29

Contacts

Author Contact Information	30
----------------------------------	----

Introduction

Since the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks, the enforcement of our nation's immigration laws has received a significant amount of attention. Some observers contend that the federal government has scarce resources to enforce immigration law and that state and local law enforcement entities should be utilized. Still, many continue to question what role state and local law enforcement agencies should have in light of limited state and local resources and immigration expertise.

States and localities bear the primary responsibility for defining and prosecuting crimes. But beyond enforcing the laws or ordinances of their state or locality, state and local officials may also have the authority to enforce some federal laws, especially criminal laws. Immigration law provides for both criminal punishments (e.g., for alien smuggling, which is prosecuted in the courts) and civil violations (e.g., lack of legal status, which may lead to removal through a separate administrative system). States and localities have traditionally only been permitted to directly enforce certain criminal provisions that fall under their jurisdictions, whereas the enforcement of the civil provisions has been viewed as a federal responsibility with states playing an incidental supporting role.

The Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) (8 U.S.C. §§1101 et seq.) currently provides limited avenues for state enforcement of both its civil and criminal provisions. In previous Congresses, several proposals had been introduced, however, that would appear to expand the role of state and local law enforcement agencies in the civil regulatory aspects of immigration law (i.e., identifying and detaining deportable aliens for purposes of removal). Adding the enforcement of civil immigration law to the role of state and local law enforcement could, in essence, involve the agencies in a seemingly unfamiliar mission. This potential expansion has prompted many to examine the legal authority by which state and local law enforcement agencies may enforce immigration law, particularly the civil enforcement measures.

This report examines the role of state and local law enforcement in enforcing immigration law. The discussion is limited to the role of state and local law enforcement in the investigation, arrest, and detention of all immigration violators. The report does not discuss the prosecution, adjudication, or removal of aliens who violate the law. The report opens with a brief discussion of the types of immigration interior enforcement activities that the former Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) pursued and the current immigration activities that are now the focus of the Department of Homeland Security (DHS). A discussion of the legal authority that permits state and local law enforcement to enforce immigration law under certain circumstances follows. Current administrative efforts to involve state and local law enforcement in enforcing immigration law as well as selected issues are discussed. The report concludes with a discussion of the potential pros and cons of such a policy and an analysis of possible policy approaches for Congress.

Background

The enforcement of immigration laws in the interior of the United States has been controversial. Traditionally, the debate posed concern over large numbers of “lawbreakers” (i.e., illegal aliens) depressing wages against perceptions that foreign labor benefits the economy and promotes relations with “source” countries. Nonetheless, after the attacks of September 11, attention refocused on the adequacy of interior immigration enforcement, especially the perceived lack of federal resources. Prior to the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks, the INS had fewer than 2,000 immigration agents to enforce immigration laws within the United States. With the merger of the interior enforcement function of the former INS with the investigative arm of the U.S. Customs Service (Customs) into DHS's Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE), the number of interior agents have increased.

In spite of the increase in interior enforcement agents, many continue to believe that the number is still insufficient. Moreover, although the consolidation increased the number of interior enforcement agents, they now have multiple missions, which include enforcing immigration law in the interior of the United States, stemming the flow of illicit drugs, and deterring money laundering, among other things.

Currently, there are express provisions in federal law that provide state and local law enforcement the authority to assist federal officers with the enforcement of immigration law under certain circumstances. Such authorities were enacted into law in 1996 in §439 of the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act (AEDPA; P.L. 104-132) and §133 and §372 of the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996 (IIRIRA; P.L. 104-208).¹ In addition to the provisions enacted in AEDPA and IIRIRA, the DHS has several initiatives with state and local law enforcement agencies to facilitate the investigation, arrest and apprehension of foreign nationals who have violated the law, as discussed below.

Criminal Alien Program²

The Criminal Alien Program (formerly known as the Alien Criminal Apprehension Program) was established in 1991 by the former INS. Although it has evolved since its initial inception, the primary purpose of the program has remained—the identification of criminal aliens. Under the current program, criminal aliens are identified by immigration officials as they are incarcerated, but prior to their release. By identifying criminal aliens while they are serving a criminal sentence, DHS, in conjunction with the Department of Justice (DOJ), is able to facilitate their removal while in state or federal custody.

National Fugitive Operations and Absconder Apprehension Initiatives

The National Fugitive Operations Program (NFOP) identifies, apprehends, and removes aliens who have failed to surrender for removal or comply with a removal order. The NFOP gives priority to criminal aliens cases.

The Absconder Apprehension Initiative was initially created to clear up the backlog of cases of aliens who had an unexecuted final order of removal. Absconders are unauthorized or criminal aliens or nonimmigrants who violated immigration law and have been ordered deported by an immigration court. In 2001, the former INS Commissioner, James Ziglar, in cooperation with the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), began to list the names of absconders in the FBI's National

¹ See discussion under "State Involvement in the Enforcement of Immigration Law."

² See <http://www.ice.gov/partners/dro/iceaccess.htm>, last accessed on March 10, 2009.

Criminal Information Center (NCIC).³ Today, ICE's Absconder Apprehension Initiative uses the data available from the NCIC databases "as a virtual force multiplier."⁴

Current Practices

Although there is quite a bit of debate with respect to state and local law enforcement officers' authority to enforce immigration law (see discussion below), as a matter of practice, it is permissible for state and local law enforcement officers to inquire into the status of an immigrant during the course of their normal duties in enforcing state and local law. This practice allows state and local law enforcement officers to play an indirect role that is incidental to their general criminal enforcement authority.

For example, when state or local officers question the immigration status of someone they have detained for a state or local violation, they may contact an ICE agent at the Law Enforcement Support Center (LESC).⁵ The federal agent may then place a detainer on the suspect, requesting the state official to keep the suspect in custody until a determination can be made as to the suspect's immigration status. However, the continued detention of such a suspect beyond the needs of local law enforcement designed to aid in the enforcement of federal immigration laws may be unlawful.⁶

Indirect state participation by means of immigration detainers is not without controversy. Many have alleged such abuses as state detentions premised on immigrant status alone and custodial arrests for traffic violations or similar offenses as pretexts for verifying an individual's status with immigration authorities. Past allegations of abuse at times have led to states and localities entering into consent decrees that strictly limit their role in the enforcement of immigration law. On the other hand, some localities have been concerned that an active role in enforcing immigration law may stretch resources and hinder community cooperation in curbing criminal activity. (See later discussion under Selected Issues.)

Authorities to Enforce Immigration Law

The power to prescribe rules as to which aliens may enter the United States and which aliens may be removed resides solely with the federal government,⁷ particularly with the Congress. To implement its plenary power, Congress has enacted and amended the INA—a comprehensive set of rules for legal immigration, naturalization, deportation, and enforcement. Concomitant to its exclusive power to determine which aliens may enter and which may stay, the federal government

³ The names of aliens with final orders of deportation was included in the NCIC, which includes both criminal aliens and aliens who violated civil immigration law.

⁴ See <http://www.ice.gov/partners/dro/iceaccess.htm>, last accessed on March 10, 2009.

⁵ Under current practice in most jurisdictions, state and local law enforcement officials can inquire into an alien's immigration status if the alien is being questioned by an officer as a result of a criminal investigation or other related matters (i.e., traffic violation). The LESL is discussed in "Selected Issues," under "Access to Database."

⁶ Charles Gordon, et. al, Immigration Law and Procedure §72.02[2][b], at 72-27 (Matthew Bender & Co., Inc. 2000) (citing Abel v. United States, 362 U.S. 217 (1960); United States v. Cruz, 559 F.2d 30 (5th Cir. 1977)).

⁷ U.S. Const., Art. I, §8, cl. 3, 4.

also has power to proscribe activities that subvert these rules (e.g., alien smuggling) and to set criminal or civil penalties for those who undertake these activities.

In examining the INA, it is crucial to distinguish the civil from criminal violations. Mere illegal presence in the U.S. is a civil, not criminal, violation of the INA, and subsequent deportation and associated administrative processes are civil proceedings.⁸ For instance, a lawfully admitted non-immigrant alien may become deportable under civil provisions if his visitor's visa expires or if his student status changes. Criminal violations of the INA, on the other hand, include felonies and misdemeanors and are prosecuted in the federal courts. These types of violations include, for example, 8 U.S.C. §1324, which addresses the bringing in and harboring of certain undocumented aliens; §1325(a), which addresses the illegal entry of aliens; and §1326, which penalizes the reentry of aliens previously excluded or deported.⁹

Congress also has exclusive authority to prescribe procedures for determining who may enter or stay and the right of aliens in these proceedings, subject to the individual rights all aliens in the United States enjoy under the Constitution. However, exclusive authority to prescribe the rules on immigration¹⁰ does not necessarily imply exclusive authority to enforce those rules. While enforcement standards and procedures may differ between the criminal and civil aspects of immigration law, Congress may authorize the states to assist in enforcing both, and state officers may exercise this authority to the degree permitted under federal and state law. There is a notion, however—one being more frequently articulated by the federal courts and the Executive branch—that states have “inherent” authority to enforce at least the federal criminal law related to immigration. This inherent authority position is now apparently beginning to be expressed with regard to the enforcement of the civil aspects of immigration law as well. State enforcement, nonetheless, must always be consistent with federal authority.

Even assuming states have some inherent authority to enforce immigration law, federal law preempts inconsistent state law where concurrent jurisdiction exists. Congress' power to preempt state law arises from the Supremacy Clause of the Constitution, which provides that “the Laws of the United States ... shall be the supreme Law of the Land ... any Thing in the Constitution or Laws of any State to the Contrary notwithstanding.”¹¹ Congressional intent is paramount in preemption analysis; accordingly, a court must determine whether Congress expressly or implicitly intended to preempt state or local action.¹² Generally, a court will determine that Congress intended to preempt a state regulation or enforcement when (1) Congress expresses preemptive intent in “explicit statutory language,” (2) when a state entity regulates “in a field that Congress intended the Federal Government to occupy exclusively,” or (3) when a state entity's activity “actually conflicts with federal law.”¹³

⁸ 8 U.S.C. §1227(a)(1)(B). Other examples of civil violations include §1253(c) (penalties relating to vessels and aircraft) and §1324d (penalties for failure to depart).

⁹ Other criminal provisions include §1253(a) disobeying a removal order, §1306 offenses relating to registration of aliens, and §1324a(f) engaging in a pattern or practice of hiring illegal aliens.

¹⁰ The federal authority to set rules on the entry of aliens and the conditions of their stay still leaves limited room for state law aimed at the alien community. If a state regulation is consistent with federal law and the equal protection requirements of the Fourteenth Amendment, it may stand. See generally De Canas v. Bica, 424 U.S. 351, 355 (1976).

¹¹ U.S. Const. Art. VI, cl.2.

¹² See, e.g., Gade v. National Solid Wastes Management Ass'n, 505 U.S. 88, 96 (1992).

¹³ English v. General Elec. Co., 496 U.S. 72, 78-79 (1990). Complete occupation of a field can be inferred from a “scheme of federal regulation ... so pervasive as to make reasonable the inference that Congress left no room for the States to supplement it,” or where an act of Congress “touches a field in which the federal interest is so dominant that (continued...)”

State Involvement in the Enforcement of Immigration Law

Setting the rules on the entry and removal of aliens is unquestionably an exclusive federal power and some would argue that uniformity in enforcing those rules is critical to the exercise of sovereign authority (i.e., it should not be enforced by states).¹⁴ Accordingly, it has been suggested that state involvement in immigration law should be strictly limited to express congressional indication for such participation.¹⁵ On the other hand, Congress can not compel the states to enforce federal immigration law and to do so in a particular way.¹⁶

From the states' point of view, the federal government's exclusive power over immigration does not preempt every state activity affecting aliens.¹⁷ And it generally has been assumed that state and local officers may enforce the criminal provisions of the INA if state law permits them to do so but are precluded from directly enforcing the INA's civil provisions.¹⁸ This view may be changing, however.

State enforcement of the criminal provisions of the INA is seen as being consistent with the state's police power to make arrests for criminal acts and the expectation that states are expected to cooperate in the enforcement of federal criminal laws.¹⁹ Civil immigration law enforcement, on the other hand, has generally been viewed as strictly a federal responsibility: The civil provisions of the INA have been assumed to constitute a pervasive and preemptive regulatory scheme—leaving no room for a direct state or local role.²⁰ The distinction between civil and criminal violations in the INA has been seen to suggest a bifurcated role for states and localities. For example, state and local law enforcement officers cannot arrest someone solely for illegal presence for the purpose of deporting them because it is a civil violation, but they can arrest the federal system will be assumed to preclude enforcement of state laws on the same subject.” Ibid., (quoting Rice v. Santa Fe Elevator Corp., 331 U.S. 218, 230 (1947)). Conflict preemption occurs where it is “impossible for a private party to comply with both state and federal requirements,” Ibid., citing Florida Lime & Avocado Growers, Inc. v. Paul, 373 U.S. 132, 142-43 (1963)), or where state law “stands as an obstacle to the accomplishment and execution of the full purposes and objectives of Congress.” Ibid., (quoting Hines v. Davidowitz, 312 U.S. 52, 67 (1941)).

(...continued)

¹⁴ Celica Renn, Selected Comment on 1986 Immigration Reform: State and Local Enforcement of the Criminal Immigration Statutes and the Preemption Doctrine, 41 U. Miami L. Rev. 999, 1023 (1987) (hereafter cited as Renn, Selected Comment); see also Linda R. Yanez and Alfonso Soto, Local Police Involvement in the Enforcement of Immigration Law, 1 Tex. Hisp. J.L. & Pol’y 9, 29 (1994).

¹⁵ Renn, Selected Comment, at 30.

¹⁶ See generally, Printz v. United States, 521 U.S. 898, 922 (1997); see, e.g., INA §287(g)(9) (“Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to require an agreement under this subsection in order for any State or political subdivision of a State to enter into an agreement with the Attorney General (AG) under this subsection.”).

¹⁷ De Canas v. Bica, 424 U.S. 351, 355 (1976); Gonzalez v. City of Peoria, 722 F. 2d 468, 474 (9th Cir. 1983).

¹⁸ See Gonzalez, 722 F. 2d at 474 (9th Cir. 1983).

¹⁹ Yanez, supra note 14, at 28-29. Cf. People v. Barajas, 81 Cal. App. 3d 999 (1978) (concluding that “the supremacy clause is a two-edged sword, and in the absence of a limitation, the states are bound by it to enforce violations of the federal immigration laws.”). Ibid., at 1006.

²⁰ Gonzalez, 722 F.2d at 474-75; see also Assistance by State and Local Police in Apprehending Illegal Aliens, 1996 OLC Lexis 76, at 2 (February 5, 1996); Jeff Lewis, et al., Authority of State and Local Officers to Arrest Aliens Suspected of Civil Infractions of Federal Immigration Law, 7 Bender’s Immigration Bulletin No. 15, p. 944 (August 1, 2002).

someone for the criminal offense of entering the country illegally.²¹ To the degree that it is not preempted, the authority of state and local law enforcement officers to investigate and arrest for violations of federal law is determined by reference to state law.²² This may be done through express authorization in state law. However, this may not be necessary according to some recent decisions from the Tenth Circuit that appear to suggest that state and local law enforcement officers may possess “inherent authority” within their respective jurisdictions to investigate and make arrests for criminal immigration matters.

The following sections briefly examine Department of Justice, Office of Legal Counsel (OLC) opinions that have examined immigration enforcement authority, analyze the major cases on the issue, and describe current provisions in law that authorize state and local involvement in the enforcement of immigration law.

Office of Legal Counsel Opinions

Several Administrations have spoken on the scope of state and local involvement. For example, a 1978 press release during the Carter Administration stressed the need for cooperation and joint federal/state law enforcement operations, but placed much emphasis on the exclusive federal role to enforce civil immigration law and the special training required to do so.²³ A 1983 statement issued by the Reagan Justice Department emphasized similar cooperative measures, but still made clear that only INS could make arrests for civil immigration violations and that state and local cooperation consisted primarily of notifying INS about, and detaining, suspected illegal aliens taken into police custody for state/local violations.²⁴ In 1989, the Department of Justice, OLC opined that local police could enforce the criminal violations of the INA, but stated that it was “unclear” under current law whether local police could enforce non-criminal federal statutes.²⁵ More recently, a 1996 OLC opinion concluded that state and local police did possess the authority to arrest aliens for criminal violations of the INA, but lacked recognized legal authority to enforce the civil provisions of immigration law.²⁶

A shift in policy towards increasing the role and authority of local law enforcement officers in the field of immigration enforcement came following the terrorist attacks in September 2001. In December 2001 the INS reportedly began sending the names of thousands of noncitizens to the NCIC databases as part of the Absconder Apprehension Initiative. At a 2002 press conference, Attorney General Ashcroft confirmed the existence of a new OLC opinion that, among other things, expressed the department’s view that state and local officials have “inherent authority” to ²¹ Illegal entry is a misdemeanor under INA §275. Because many encounters between local police and undocumented aliens involve warrantless arrests, an officer’s authority to apprehend a person in violation of §275 will necessarily depend on whether state arrest statutes permit an arrest for a misdemeanor occurring outside the officer’s presence, since the misdemeanor of illegal entry is apparently completed at the time of entry, and is not a “continuing” offense that occurs in the presence of the officer. A continuing offense may be found under INA §276, which applies to aliens previously deported who enter or are found in the United States.

²² Vasquez-Alvarez, 176 F.3d at 1295; 84 Op. Atty. Gen. Cal. 189 (November 16, 2001) 2001 Cal. AG Lexis 46, at *15; 2000 Op. Atty Gen. N.Y. 1001 (March 21, 2000) 2000 N.Y. AG Lexis 2, at *11-12.

²³ Interpreter Releases, vol. 55, August 9, 1978, p. 306 (quoting DOJ press release).

²⁴ Interpreter Releases, vol. 60, March 4, 1983, pp. 172-73 (quoting February 10, 1983, statement).

²⁵ Dep’t of Justice, Office of Legal Counsel, Handling of INS Warrants of Deportation in Relation to NCIC Wanted Person File, at 4, 5, & n.11 (April 11, 1989).

²⁶ Dep’t of Justice, Office of Legal Counsel, Assistance by State and Local Police in Apprehending Illegal Aliens, 1996 OLC Lexis 76, at 2 (February 5, 1996). (Hereafter cited as 1996 OLC Opinion).

enforce federal immigration law, including the civil enforcement provisions. According to the Attorney General:

When federal, state and local law enforcement officers encounter an alien of national security concern who has been listed on the NCIC for violating immigration law, federal law permits them to arrest that person and transfer him to the custody of the INS. The Justice Department's Office of Legal Counsel has concluded that this narrow, limited mission that we are asking state and local police to undertake voluntarily—arresting aliens who have violated criminal provisions of the Immigration and Nationality Act or civil provisions that render an alien deportable, and who are listed on the NCIC—is within the inherent authority of states.²⁷ (emphasis added)

Initially, the Department of Justice did not release or publish the 2002 OLC opinion. Accordingly, several immigrant and public interest groups sought disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA). The department, however, claimed that the memorandum was exempt from disclosure under FOIA based on the deliberative process and attorney-client privileges. A lawsuit seeking the release of the 2002 OLC opinion was subsequently filed by the groups against the Department of Justice. In May of 2005, the Second Circuit granted the interest groups' FOIA request and mandated that the department release the 2002 OLC opinion.²⁸ The department released the opinion in July of 2005 but was allowed to redact certain sections.²⁹

The 2002 OLC opinion concludes that (1) states have inherent power, subject to federal preemption, to make arrests for violations of federal law; (2) the advice provided in the 1996 OLC opinion that federal law precludes state police from arresting aliens on the basis of civil deportability was mistaken; and (3) 8 U.S.C. §1252c did not preempt state authority to arrest for federal violations. As to the first conclusion, the opinion focuses on the authority of states, as sovereign entities, to retain certain police powers under the Constitution, namely, the inherent authority to make arrests for a violation of federal law. With respect to the second conclusion, the 2002 opinion discredits much of the authority cited in the 1996 and 1989 opinions, takes into account case law not previously considered, and frames the preemption issue differently (from the earlier opinions).³⁰ The analysis under the third conclusion examines the legislative history of §1252c and a Tenth Circuit case to find a strong presumption against preemption.

Critics have described the newly released opinion as “deeply flawed” and unsupported by legislative history or judicial precedent.³¹ It has been stated, for example, that (1) immigration has long been recognized as a distinctly federal concern; (2) federal law authorizes state and local enforcement of the immigration laws only in specific circumstances, not broadly; (3) the opinion does not address the significant distinction between criminal and non-criminal enforcement; and ²⁷ Federal News Service, Press Conference With U.S. AG John Ashcroft and James Ziglar, Commissioner, INS, Re: Tracking of Foreign Visitors (June 5, 2002).

²⁸ Nat'l Council of La Raza v. Dep't of Justice, 411 F.3d 350 (2nd Cir. 2005).

²⁹ Dep't of Justice, Office of Legal Counsel, Non-preemption of the authority of state and local law enforcement officials to arrest aliens for immigration violations, (April 3, 2002) (Hereafter cited as 2002 OLC opinion) available at <http://www.aclu.org/FilesPDFs/ACF27DA.pdf>.

³⁰ For example, the 2002 opinion states that the issue at hand does not fit under the typical preemption scenario, but instead, presents the question of whether states can assist the federal government by arresting aliens who have violated federal law (emphasis in original). As such, relying on the dictum discussed in the Gonzales v. City of Peoria case (see text under Case Law) was “entirely misplaced,” according to the opinion.

³¹ American Civil Liberties Union, Refutation of 2002 DOJ Memo, (September 6, 2005) available at <http://www.aclu.org/FilesPDFs/ACF3189.pdf>.

(4) the opinion could have implications far beyond the immigration context.³² It should also be recognized that although the 2002 OLC opinion describes a position in contrast to previous policy, it cannot compel state action nor does it carry the same weight as an act of Congress. Generally, interpretations contained in opinion letters are not controlling and should be followed only insofar as they have the “power to persuade.”³³

Case Law

The issue of whether state and local law enforcement agencies are precluded from enforcing provisions of the INA was analyzed in the Ninth Circuit case of Gonzalez v. City of Peoria.³⁴ In Gonzalez, the Ninth Circuit examined the City of Peoria’s policies that authorized local officers to arrest illegal immigrants for violating the criminal entry provision of the INA (8 U.S.C. §1325).³⁵ The arrestees claimed that the INA represented a full federal occupation of the field, which would in turn preempt state action. The court turned to the legislative history of §1324(c)³⁶ and determined that when Congress specifically removed language limiting the enforcement of §1324 to federal officers and inserted specific language authorizing local enforcement, that “it implicitly made the local enforcement authority as to all three criminal statutes (i.e., §§1324, 1325, 1326) identical.”³⁷ Accordingly, the Ninth Circuit declared that local police officers may, subject to state law, constitutionally stop or detain individuals when there is reasonable suspicion or, in the case of arrests, probable cause that such persons have violated, or are violating, the criminal provisions of the INA.³⁸

With regards to preemption, the Gonzalez court determined that the criminal immigration provisions were “few in number,” “relatively simple in their terms,” constituted a “narrow and distinct element” of the INA, and did not require a “complex administrative structure” consistent with exclusive federal control.³⁹ The court, therefore, concluded that the criminal provisions did not support the inference that the federal government occupied the field of criminal immigration enforcement.

With respect to civil immigration enforcement, Gonzalez has been construed to support the argument that states do not possess the authority, “inherent” or otherwise, (unless specifically granted by Congress) to enforce the civil enforcement measures of the INA.⁴⁰ In conducting a ³² For example, it has been suggested that the 2002 OLC opinion could support state and local arrests for violations of federal tax, environmental, finance, food safety, and education laws. See ibid.

³³ Christensen v. Harris County, 529 U.S. 576, 587 (2000).

³⁴ Gonzalez v. City of Peoria, 722 F.2d 468, 474 (9th Cir. 1983).

³⁵ The plaintiffs alleged that the city police engaged in the practice of stopping and arresting persons of Mexican descent without reasonable suspicion or probable cause and based only on their race. Furthermore, they alleged that those persons stopped under this policy were required to provide identification of legal presence in the U.S. and that anyone without acceptable identification was detained at the jail for release to immigration authorities.

³⁶ 8 U.S.C. §1324 prohibits the bringing in and harboring of certain undocumented aliens (see later discussion under “Express Authorization”).

³⁷ See Gonzalez, 722 F. 2d at 475 (citing H.R. 1505, 82nd Cong., 2d sess, reprinted in 1952 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1358, 1360-61).

³⁸ Gonzalez, 722 F.2d at 475.

³⁹ Ibid., at 474-75.

⁴⁰ See, e.g., 1996 OLC Opinion; 84 Op. Atty. Gen. Cal. 189 (November 16, 2001) 2001 Cal. AG Lexis 46; 2000 Op. Atty Gen. N.Y. 1001 (March 21, 2000) 2000 N.Y. AG Lexis 2.

preemption analysis for certain criminal provisions of the INA, the Ninth Circuit in Gonzalez made a distinction between the civil and criminal provisions of the INA, and assumed that the former constituted a pervasive and preemptive regulatory scheme, whereas the latter did not. The court stated:

We assume that the civil provisions of the Act regulating authorized entry, length of stay, residence status, and deportation, constitute such a pervasive regulatory scheme, as would be consistent with the exclusive federal power over immigration. However, this case [Gonzalez] does not concern that broad scheme, but only a narrow and distinct element of it—the regulation of criminal immigration activity by aliens.⁴¹

Accordingly, the court concluded that the authority of state officials to enforce the provisions of the INA “is limited to criminal provisions.”⁴² The preemption analysis in Gonzalez has been criticized by some for parsing the INA when statutory construction and preemption principles generally require consideration of the whole statutory scheme in evaluating a specific provision.⁴³ While Gonzalez appears to stand for the proposition that states do not possess the authority to enforce civil immigration laws, it has been argued that the preemption analysis in Gonzalez was based merely on an assumption and was outside the holding of the case, and thus does not constitute binding precedent.⁴⁴ Whether this conclusion is completely accurate has yet to be tested in the courts in a definitive manner, although some decisions from the Tenth Circuit regarding criminal investigations may be seen by some as strengthening the role of state and local law enforcement agencies in immigration enforcement.

In the Tenth Circuit case of United States v. Salinas-Calderon,⁴⁵ a state trooper pulled over the defendant for driving erratically but soon found six individuals in the back of the defendant’s truck. Because the defendant, who was eventually charged with the crime of illegally transporting aliens did not speak English, the state trooper questioned the passenger (the defendant’s wife) and learned that the driver and the other six individuals were in the country illegally. From this line of questioning, the court determined that the trooper had probable cause to detain and arrest all the individuals.

In addition to the probable cause conclusion, the Tenth Circuit determined that a “state trooper has general investigatory authority to inquire into possible immigration violations.”⁴⁶ It has been argued that since there was no reason to believe that the alien passengers had committed any criminal violations (i.e., they were only in the country illegally—a civil violation), the court’s statement appears to apply fully to civil as well as criminal violations.⁴⁷ The Salinas-Calderon court, however, did not differentiate between civil and criminal INA violations nor did it address the charges or judicial proceedings for the six alien individuals found in the back of the truck.

⁴¹ Gonzalez, 722 F.2d at 474-75.

⁴² Ibid., at 476.

⁴³ Linda R. Yanez and Alfonso Soto, Local Police Involvement in the Enforcement of Immigration Law, 1 Tex. Hisp. J.L. & Pol’y 9 (1994), at 28-29.

⁴⁴ CLEAR Act Hearing, H.R. 2671 (October 1, 2003) (testimony of Kris W. Kobach, Professor of Law, Univ. of Missouri-Kansas City).

⁴⁵ United States v. Salinas-Calderon, 728 F.2d 1298 (10th Cir. 1984).

⁴⁶ Salinas-Calderon, 728 F. 2d. at 1302 n. 3.

⁴⁷ See CLEAR Act Hearing, H.R. 2671 (October 1, 2003) (testimony of Kris W. Kobach, Professor of Law, Univ. of Missouri-Kansas City).

Instead, the focus of the Salinas-Calderon decision was on the probable cause and potential suppression of the statements made by the six alien passengers.

In United States v. Vasquez-Alvarez, an Oklahoma police officer arrested a Hispanic male suspected of drug dealing because he was an “illegal alien.”⁴⁸ A specific provision in the INA (8 U.S.C. §1252c) authorizes state officers to pick up and hold for deportation a previously deported alien who had been convicted of a crime in the United States and reentered illegally. Section 1225c requires state officers to obtain confirmation from the INS before making such an arrest. At the time of the arrest in Vasquez-Alvarez, however, the state officer did not have actual knowledge of the defendant’s immigration status or past criminal behavior; it was only later discovered that the alien had a history of prior criminal convictions and deportations.

The defendant argued that the state police could only arrest him in accordance with the restrictions detailed in 8 U.S.C. §1252c and since his arrest did not meet the requirements of that provision, it was unauthorized. The Tenth Circuit, however, ultimately concluded that §1252c “does not limit or displace the preexisting general authority of state or local police officers to investigate and make arrests for violations of federal law, including immigration law. Instead, §1252c merely creates an additional vehicle for the enforcement of federal immigration law.”⁴⁹

The court also recognized that it had previously determined in Salinas-Calderon that state law enforcement officers have the general authority to investigate and make arrests for violations of federal immigration laws.⁵⁰ The court concluded that the “legislative history (of §1252c) does not contain the slightest indication that Congress intended to displace any preexisting enforcement power already in the hands of state and local officers.”⁵¹ While Vasquez-Alvarez may be interpreted to suggest that state and local police officers do in fact possess the “inherent authority” to enforce all aspects of immigration law, it should be noted that the case arose in the context of a criminal investigation and was premised on Oklahoma law, which allows local law enforcement officials to make arrests for violations of federal law, including immigration laws.⁵²

Expanding on Vasquez-Alvarez, the Tenth Circuit, in United States v. Santana-Garcia,⁵³ again addressed the role of local law enforcement in immigration. In Santana-Garcia, a Utah police officer stopped a vehicle for a traffic violation. The driver of the car did not speak English and did not possess a driver’s license. The passenger of the car spoke limited English and explained that they were traveling from Mexico to Colorado, which prompted the officer to ask if they were “legal.” The passenger and the driver appeared to understand the question and answered “no.” From these facts, the court held that the officer had probable cause to arrest both defendants for suspected violation of federal immigration law.

⁴⁸ United States v. Vasquez-Alvarez, 176 F. 3d 1294 (10th Cir. 1999).

⁴⁹ Ibid., at 1295.

⁵⁰ Ibid., at 1296 (citing Salinas-Calderon, 728 F.2d at 1301-02 & n.3 (10th Cir. 1984)).

⁵¹ Ibid., at 1299.

⁵² Ibid., at 1297 (citing 11 Okla. Op. Att’y Gen. 345 (1979), 1979 WL 37653). See also United States v. Daigle, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14533 (D. Me. July 19, 2005) (finding state statutory authority for the stop of a person suspected of the federal immigration offense of entering the country without inspection because (1) the immigration offense was the functional equivalent to a state Class E or Class D offense and (2) state law authorizes an officer to make a warrantless arrest for an analogous offense if, among other things, the stop and arrest are made upon a “fresh pursuit” or “reasonable time” after the commission of the offense (Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 17-A, §15(2)).

⁵³ United States v. Santana-Garcia, 264 F.3d 1188 (10th Cir. 2001).

In recognizing that state and local police officers had “implicit authority” within their respective jurisdictions to investigate and make arrests for violations of immigration law, the court seemingly dismissed the suggestion that state law must explicitly grant local authorities the power to arrest for a federal immigration law violation.⁵⁴ To come to this conclusion, the court relied upon a number of inferences from earlier decisions that recognized the “implicit authority” or “general investigatory authority” of state officers to inquire into possible immigration violations.⁵⁵ The court also seemed to rely upon a broad understanding of a Utah state law that empowers officers to make warrantless arrests for any public offense committed in the officers presence to include violations of federal law.⁵⁶

Although the defendants in Santana-Garcia were apparently in violation of a civil provision of the INA (i.e., illegal presence), the Santana-Garcia court made no distinction between the civil and criminal violations of the INA, and the authorities the court cited generally involved arrests for criminal matters. Moreover, it remains unclear how the court, pursuant to its broad understanding of the Utah state law it relied upon, would have ruled absent the initial reason for the stop—the traffic violation. Accordingly, it can be argued that this case still seems to leave unresolved the extent to which state and local police officers may enforce the civil provisions of the INA as such.

The aforementioned cases ultimately arose in the context of enforcing criminal matters or violations of state law. This would seem to weaken the argument for an independent role in enforcing civil immigration matters. Nonetheless, as the cases from the Tenth Circuit illustrate, there appears to be a general movement towards expanding the role of state and local law enforcement officers in the field of immigration law, including some aspects of civil immigration enforcement.

Express Authorization for State and Local Law Enforcement Officers to Enforce Immigration Law

Clearly preemption does not bar state and local immigration enforcement where Congress has evidenced intent to authorize such enforcement.⁵⁷ In exercising its power to regulate immigration, Congress is free to delegate to the states, among other things, the activities of arresting, holding, and transporting aliens. Indeed, Congress already has created avenues for the participation of state and local officers in the enforcement of the federal immigration laws.

⁵⁴ Ibid., at 1194. The court, nonetheless, cited Utah’s peace officer statute (Utah Code Ann. §77-7-2) which empowers Utah state troopers to make warrantless arrests for “any public offense.” The court also found Defendant’s acknowledgment in Vasquez-Alvarez that Oklahoma law specifically authorized local law enforcement officials to make arrests for violations of federal law unnecessary to that decision. Ibid., at 1194 n. 7.

⁵⁵ Citing Salinas-Calderon, 728 F. 2d 1298 (10th Cir. 1984); United States v. Janik, 723 F. 2d 537, 548 (7th Cir. 1983); United States v. Bowdach, 561 F. 2d 1160, 1167 (5th Cir. 1977).

⁵⁶ Santana-Garcia, 264 F. 3d at 1194 n. 8 (citing Utah Code Ann. §77-7-2).

⁵⁷ Conversely, state action may be preempted where Congress explicitly manifests its intent in law. Such an intent is evidenced in INA §274A(h)(2) (8 U.S.C. §1324A(h)(2)), which explicitly prohibits states from imposing civil or criminal sanctions upon those who employ, recruit, or refer unauthorized aliens. Other provisions that expressly consider the role of states are INA §287(d) (state and local police are requested to report to INS arrests related to controlled substances when the suspect is believed to be unlawfully in the country) and INA §288 (instructing INS to rely on state and local police for the enforcement of local laws within immigrant stations).

8 U.S.C. §1357(g)

One of the broadest grants of authority for state and local immigration enforcement activity stems from §133 of the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996, which amended INA §287 (8 U.S.C. §1357(g)). This provision authorizes the AG (now the Secretary of Homeland Security) to enter into a written agreement with a State, or any political subdivision of a State, pursuant to which an officer or employee of the State or subdivision, who is determined by the Attorney General to be qualified to perform a function of an immigration officer in relation to the investigation, apprehension, or detention of aliens in the United States (including the transportation of such aliens across State lines to detention centers), may carry out such function at the expense of the State or political subdivision and to the extent consistent with State and local law.

Section 1357(g) allows for significant flexibility. It permits state and local entities to tailor an agreement with the AG to meet local needs, contemplates the authorization of multiple officers, and does not require the designated officers to stop performing their local duties.⁵⁸ In performing a function under §1357(g), the written agreement must articulate the specific powers and duties that may be, or are required to be, performed by the state officer, the duration of the authority, and the position of the agent of the AG who is required to supervise and direct the individual.⁵⁹

8 U.S.C. §1357(g)(2) requires that state officers “have knowledge of and adhere to” federal law governing immigration officers in addition to requiring adequate training regarding the enforcement of immigration laws. Section 1357(g)(3) mandates that the AG direct and supervise state officers who are performing immigration functions pursuant to §1357(g). Under §1357(g)(6), the AG, in carrying out §1357(g), can not accept a service if the service will displace any federal employee. Officers designated by the AG are not federal employees except for certain tort claims and compensation matters, but they do enjoy federal immunity.⁶⁰ Section 1357(g)(9) establishes that a state is not required to enter into an agreement with the AG under §1357(g); furthermore, under §1357(g)(10) no agreement is required for a state officer to communicate with the AG regarding the immigration status of any individual or to cooperate with the AG in the identification, apprehension, detention, or removal of aliens unlawfully present in the United States.

8 U.S.C. §1103(a)(8)

Section 372 of IIRIRA amended INA §103(a) to allow the AG to call upon state and local police in an immigration emergency (8 U.S.C. §1103(a)). 8 U.S.C. §1103(a)(8) provides:

In the event that the Attorney General determines that an actual or imminent mass influx of aliens arriving off the coast of the United States or near a land border presents urgent circumstances requiring an immediate Federal response, the Attorney General may authorize any State or local law enforcement officer, with the consent of the head of the department, agency or establishment under whose jurisdiction the individual is serving, to perform or exercise any of the power, privileges or duties conferred or imposed by the Act or regulations issued thereunder upon officers or employees of the service.

⁵⁸ Jay T. Jorgensen, Comment, The Practical Power of State and Local Governments to Enforce Federal Immigration Laws, 1997 B.Y.U. L. Rev. 899, 925 (1997).

⁵⁹ INA §287(g)(5).

⁶⁰ INA §287(g)(7)(8).

Thus, under 8 U.S.C. §1103(a)(8), state and local officers may exercise the civil or criminal arrest powers of federal immigration officers (1) when expressly authorized by the AG; (2) when given consent by the head of the state or local law enforcement agency; and (3) upon the AG's determination of an emergency due to a mass influx of aliens. Any authority given by the AG to state law enforcement officers under this provision can only be exercised during the emergency situation.

On July 24, 2002, the DOJ issued a final rule that implemented §1103(a)(8) and described the cooperative process by which state or local governments could agree to place authorized state and local law enforcement officers under the direction of the INS in exercising federal immigration enforcement authority.⁶¹ In February of 2003, the DOJ found it necessary to amend the previous regulations, however, because it determined that the AG did not have the flexibility to address unanticipated situations that might occur during a mass influx of aliens. The new rules also allow the AG to abbreviate or waive the otherwise normally required training requirements when such an action is necessary to protect public safety, public health, or national security.⁶²

8 U.S.C. §1252c

Section 1252c originated in the House of Representatives as a floor amendment to the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996 (AEDPA §439).⁶³ Section 1252c authorizes the arrest of aliens by state and local officers who have presumably violated §276 of the INA (Reentry of Removed Alien). Section 1252c(a) states in part:

[T]o the extent permitted by relevant State and local law, State and local law enforcement officials are authorized to arrest and detain an individual who—

- (1) is an alien illegally present in the United States; and
- (2) has previously been convicted of a felony in the United States and deported or left the United States after such conviction, but only after the State or local law enforcement officials obtain appropriate confirmation from the Immigration and Naturalization Service of the status of such individual and only for such period of time as may be required for the Service to take the individual into Federal custody for purposes of deporting or removing the alien from the United States.

The purpose of §1252c was to overcome a perceived federal limitation on the ability of state and local officers to arrest an alien known by them to be dangerous because of past crimes committed in their jurisdiction.⁶⁴ The court in United States v. Vasquez-Alvarez, however, found that neither the defendant, the government, or the court could identify any pre-§1252c limitations on the powers of state and local officers to enforce federal law.⁶⁵ Section 1252c(b) also mandates cooperation between the AG and the states to assure that information in the control of the AG, ⁶¹ Codified at 28 C.F.R. §65.84; see also 67 Federal Register 48354.

⁶² Abbreviation or Waiver of Training for State or Local Law Enforcement Officers Authorized To Enforce Immigration Law During a Mass Influx of Aliens, 68 Fed. Reg. 8820-8822 (February 26, 2003) (codified at 28 C.F.R. §65.84(a)(4)).

⁶³ P.L. 104-132, §439. See 142 Congressional Record 4619 (Rep. Doolittle offering amend. no. 7 to H.R. 2703).

⁶⁴ Vasquez-Alvarez, 176 F. 3d at 1299.

⁶⁵ Vasquez-Alvarez, 176 F. 3d at 1299, n. 4.

including information in the NCIC, that would assist state and local law enforcement officials in carrying out the duties of §1252c is made available to the states.

8 U.S.C. 1324(c)

Congress appears to have delegated arrest authority to local law enforcement officers in 8 U.S.C. §1324 (INA §274), which establishes a number of criminal penalties for the smuggling, transporting, concealing, and harboring of illegal aliens. Subsection (c) of §1324, entitled “Authority to Arrest” states that:

[n]o officer or person shall have authority to make any arrest for a violation of any provision of this section except officers and employees of the Service designated by the Attorney General, either individually or as a member of a class, and all other officers whose duty it is to enforce criminal laws. (emphasis added)

The plain language in this subsection seems to indicate that local law enforcement officers—that is, officers authorized to enforce criminal laws—are empowered to make arrests for the smuggling, transporting, and harboring offenses described in §1324. The legislative history of §1324 confirms this understanding. The Senate-passed version of this provision stated that arrests for violations only could be made by INS agents and “other officers of the United States whose duty it is to enforce criminal laws.”⁶⁶ The House, however, struck the words “of the United States,” so that local officials could enforce this specific provision.⁶⁷ The elimination of the limiting phrase “of the United States,” appears to make Congress’s intent clear that all criminal law enforcement officers, federal or otherwise, are authorized to enforce §1324.⁶⁸

Current Efforts⁶⁹

As mentioned above, IIRIRA amended the INA by authorizing the AG (now the Secretary of Homeland Security) to enter into written agreements with states or political subdivisions of a state so that qualified officers could perform specified immigration-related duties. This authority was given new urgency following the terrorist attacks in September 2001. In 2002, the AG proposed an initiative to enter into such agreements in an effort to carry out the country’s anti-terrorism mission. Under such agreements, commonly referred to as 287(g) programs, state and local law enforcement officers could be deputized to assist the federal government with enforcing certain aspects of immigration law. To date, ICE has entered into such agreements with several jurisdictions.⁷⁰ Following is a discussion of selected MOAs.

⁶⁶ 98 Cong. Rec. 810, 813 (1952) (emphasis added).

⁶⁷ Conf. Rep. No. 1505, 82 Cong., 2d (1952). Former Representative Walter offered the amendment to strike the words “of the United States.” He stated that the purpose of the amendment was “to make it possible for any law enforcement officer to make an arrest.” 98 Cong. Rec. 1414-15 (1952).

⁶⁸ As previously discussed, the 9th Circuit in Gonzalez used the legislative history of §1324(c) to conclude that local law enforcement officers are authorized to enforce all criminal immigration matters.

⁶⁹ The agreements discussed in this section are current as of November 19, 2008.

⁷⁰ For a list of jurisdictions that have entered into a 287(g) agreement, see Appendix A.

Florida's Memorandum of Understanding

Background

In September 2002, the state of Florida Department of Law Enforcement (FDLE) and DOJ entered into a one-year Memorandum of Agreement (MOA). The MOA was designed as a pilot program that authorized 35 state and local law enforcement officers to work on Florida's Regional Domestic Security Task Forces (RDSTF). The task forces performed immigration enforcement functions that pertain to domestic security and counter-terrorism needs of the nation and the state of Florida.

Under Florida's renewed MOA with DHS, selected officers are authorized to enforce immigration laws and policies upon successful completion of mandatory training provided by DHS instructors.⁷¹ Officers assigned to the RDSTF are nominated by the co-directors of each RDSTF and are presented to the FDLE for consideration. Each nominee has to be a U.S. citizen, have been a sworn officer for a minimum of three years, and have, at minimum, an Associate Degree. Candidates also must be able to qualify for federal security clearances. Once selected, each candidate's employer has to indicate that it will allow the officer to work a significant portion of his work responsibilities within the RDSTF for a minimum of one year.

Training

Training for the officers is provided by ICE at a mutually designated site in Florida. The program uses ICE curriculum and competency testing, which includes information on the following: (1) the scope of the officer's authority; (2) cross-cultural issues; (3) the proper use of force; (4) civil rights law; and (5) liability issues. Officers also receive specific training on their obligations under federal law and the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations on making proper notification upon the arrest of foreign nationals. All training materials are provided by DHS, while the employing agency is responsible for the salaries and benefits of the officers in training. The FDLE covers the costs of housing and meals during training.

Upon successful completion of the training, DHS provides a signed document setting forth the officer's authorization to perform specified immigration enforcement functions for an initial period of one year. The officer's performance is evaluated by the District Director and the FDLE commissioner on a quarterly basis to assure compliance with the MOA requirements. Authorization of the officer's powers could be revoked at any time by DHS, FDLE or the employing agency.

Immigration-related activities performed by the officers are supervised by DHS. Participating officers cannot perform any immigration officer functions except when fulfilling their assigned RDSTF duties and under the direct supervision of a DHS officer. The DHS officer coordinates the involvement of the officers in DHS-related operations in consultation with the RDSTF supervisor to assure appropriate utilization of personnel. Under the MOA, officers cannot be utilized in ⁷¹ Under the MOA, law enforcement officers have the following authorities: (1) interrogate an alien in order to determine if there is probable cause for an immigration arrest; (2) arrest an alien without warrant for civil and criminal immigration violations; (3) complete required arrest reports and forms; (4) prepare affidavits and take sworn statements; (5) transport aliens; (6) assist in pre-trial and post-arrest case processing of aliens taken into custody by the ICE; (7) detain arrested aliens in ICE approved detention facilities.

routine DHS operations unless it relates to the RDSTF's domestic security and counter-terrorism functions. All arrest made under this authority must be reported to ICE within 24 hours. To date, Florida has trained and certified 63 officers.

Complaint Procedures

Florida's MOA requires complaint procedures to be disseminated throughout the state in English and any other appropriate languages. Under the MOA, complaints can be accepted from any source and submitted to federal or state authorities. All complaints received by the federal government, FDLE or the officer's employing agency have to be reported to ICE's Office of Internal Audit. Under the MOA, complaints reported directly to ICE must be shared with FDLE, at which time both agencies would determine the appropriate jurisdiction for the complaint to be resolved. Under the MOA, complainants must receive notification of the receipt of the complaint, and officers involved could be removed from participation in activities covered under the MOA pending resolution of the complaint.

Program Evaluation

Under the MOA, the Secretary of DHS and the commissioner of FDLE are require to establish a steering committee to periodically review and assess the effectiveness of the operations conducted by the task forces. The reviews are intended to assure that the efforts remain focused on the investigation of domestic security and counter-terrorism related matters. According to the MOA, within nine months of certification an evaluation of the program should be conducted by DHS with cooperation from other involved entities.⁷²

Alabama's Memorandum of Understanding

Background and Training

On September 10, 2003, the state of Alabama and DHS entered into an MOA that is similar to Florida's MOA. Officers are nominated by the Director of the state's Department of Public Safety (DPS) and forwarded to ICE. As with Florida's MOA, all nominees must be U.S. citizens, have at least three years of experience as a sworn law enforcement officer, and be able to qualify for federal security clearances. Unlike Florida's MOA, however, there is no minimal education requirement. Training is provided by ICE, and the curriculum is the same as provided in Florida's MOA. DPS is responsible for all expenses incurred during training and updated training will be provided to the officers at the end of their initial year of appointment.

Immigration enforcement activities of the officers will be supervised and directed by ICE special agents, who are located in Huntsville, Birmingham and Montgomery, Alabama. Such activities can only be performed under direct supervision of ICE special agents. Arrests made under the authority must be reported to ICE within 24 hours, and will be reviewed by the ICE special agent on an ongoing basis to ensure compliance with immigration laws and procedures. To date, 60 Alabama state troopers have been trained under this program.

⁷² The evaluation should include statistical evaluation, reports, records, officer evaluation, case reviews, complaint records, site visits, media coverage and community interaction.

Jail-Based MOAs

Several jurisdictions in Arizona, California, North Carolina, and Tennessee entered into MOAs with ICE and will act as a force multiplier for the Criminal Alien Program. They will do so by ensuring that criminal aliens incarcerated at the federal, state, and local levels are not released back into the community upon the completion of their sentences. Following is a discussion of two such MOAs.

Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department MOA

In February 2005, the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department (LASD) entered into an MOA with ICE. The terms of the MOA are similar to those of Florida and Alabama with several exceptions. Under the MOA, LASD personnel in county jails are authorized to (1) complete required criminal alien processing; (2) prepare immigration detainers; (3) prepare affidavits and take sworn statements (4) prepare Notice to Appear (NTA) applications; and (5) interrogate in order to determine probable cause for an immigration violation.⁷³ The MOA explicitly states that both parties understand that the LASD will not continue to detain an alien after the alien becomes eligible for release from LASD custody in accordance to applicable law and policy, except for a period of 48 hours excluding weekends and holidays. The MOA also specifies that the LASD has sole discretion to terminate the MOA should the State Criminal Alien Assistance Program (SCAAP)⁷⁴ funding fall below an acceptable level or is terminated in its entirety.

Arizona's MOA

In September 2005, the Arizona Department of Corrections (ADOC) entered into an MOA with the Department of Homeland Security in an effort to enhance Arizona's capacity to deal with immigration violators in Arizona. The director of the Arizona Department of Corrections nominated eight correction officer candidates and two supervisory correctional officers for initial training and certification. All candidates were required to have a minimum of two years with ADOC and be bilingual in English and Spanish. Other criteria included not being married to a person illegally present in the United States, or knowingly having family associations that could adversely impact their ability to perform ICE functions under the MOA. The selected officers' principal assignments are in Phoenix and Perryville. There is no termination date for Arizona's MOA, however, it does contain the stipulation that it can be temporarily suspended should resource constraints or competing priorities necessitate.

Under the MOA, correctional officers have the following authorities: (1) interrogate an alien to determine whether there is probable cause for an immigration violation, (2) complete required arrest reports and forms, (3) prepare affidavits and take sworn statements, (4) prepare immigration detainers and I-213 Record of Deportable/Inadmissible Alien reports, and (5) prepare Notice to Appear or other removal charging documents.

⁷³ The aforementioned functions are usually performed by ICE agents in preparation for possible deportation proceedings and/or deportation.

⁷⁴ SCAAP is a federal grant program that reimburses states and localities for correctional officers' salary costs incurred for incarcerating undocumented criminal aliens.

Complaint Procedures

Complaint procedures under these MOAs are the same as those described in the Florida MOA. Community and media relations in the MOAs are stressed, and ICE will engage in community outreach with any organization or individuals expressing interest in the MOAs. All information released to the media must be coordinated between ICE and state law enforcement entities.

Commonalities in the MOAs

In all MOAs, officers are treated as federal employees for the purpose of the Federal Tort Claims Act⁷⁵ and worker's compensation claims when performing duties authorized under the MOAs. They also have the same immunities and defenses of ICE officers from personal liability from tort suits.⁷⁶ Under the MOAs, officers named as defendants in litigation arising from activities carried out under the MOA may request representation by the DOJ. The MOAs of the participants stipulate that any party can terminate the MOA at anytime. Currently, none of the MOAs discussed have termination dates.

Total Number of Law Enforcement Officers Trained

According to ICE, as of November 2008, more than 950 officers have been trained and certified through the 287(g) program under 67 active MOAs.⁷⁷ Appendix A shows the participating law enforcement agencies that are participating in the program since August 29, 2007.

Selected Issues

In addition to the legal complexities that may arise with respect to utilizing state and local law enforcement to enforce immigration law, several additional issues have been noted.

State and Local Policies Regarding Immigration Enforcement

Some jurisdictions have, through resolutions, executive orders, or city ordinances expressly defined or limited their role and the activities of their employees regarding immigration enforcement.⁷⁸ Critics of this approach maintain that these kinds of policies can create "sanctuary" cities that ultimately encourage illegal immigration. Supporters of these policies, on the other hand, maintain that they are called for by resource and legal constraints, the need to avoid the disruption of critical municipal services, or basic human rights considerations. Although there is no generally accepted definition of what policies constitute "sanctuary" the issue has become increasingly contentious.

⁷⁵ 28 U.S.C. §§2671-2680.

⁷⁶ 5 U.S.C. §§8101 et seq.

⁷⁷ Immigration and Customs Enforcement, Fact Sheet: The ICE 287(g) Program: A Law Enforcement Partnership, November 19, 2008.

⁷⁸ See for example, San Francisco (CA) Administrative Code, Section 12H.2.

Other jurisdictions have taken steps to reject what they characterize as “sanctuary policies” and encourage their law enforcement officers to cooperate with ICE. For example, on May 1, 2006, the General Assembly of Colorado passed legislation requiring all peace officers to cooperate with state and federal officials regarding immigration law. The law also requires each governing body to submit written documentation that it has informed its peace officers in writing of their responsibilities regarding such cooperation and statistics regarding the number of reports made annually to ICE.⁷⁹ In October 2006, the Houston Police Department, which some had previously described as having a sanctuary policy, announced that it would work more closely with immigration officials to identify illegal immigrants involved in crime. Under the new policy police officers are barred from inquiring about the immigration status of people who are not under arrest. They will, begin holding suspects who have confirmed deportation warrants, previously deported felons, and anyone with a criminal warrant with ICE.⁸⁰

On January 5, 2006, the Violence Against Women and Department of Justice Reauthorization Act of 2005 was signed into law.⁸¹ The act requires the Inspector General of the Department of Justice to conduct a study of cities and localities failing to participate in the implementation of certain immigration provisions, and to provide the Congress with a list of such areas.

Access to Database

Under current practice, state and local law enforcement officials do not have direct access to information on the immigration status of an alien. In the course of their duties, if state and local law enforcement officials encounter an alien whose immigration status is in question, they can contact the LESC in Burlington, Vermont.⁸² Immigration officials at the LESC query a database that contains information on an alien’s immigration status. If the alien is unauthorized to be present in the country and the state or local law enforcement official has decided that the alien will be released from their jurisdiction, immigration officials are notified to come and pick up the alien.⁸³

In addition to the LESC, state and local law enforcement officials can access the NCIC for those aliens who are listed as absconders.⁸⁴ Aliens listed on the absconder list can be detained by state and local law enforcement officials because they are in violation of the federal criminal code. It has been reported, however, that the FBI has a backlog with respect to entering the names of over 350,000 absconders in the database.⁸⁵

⁷⁹ Co. Rev. Stat. §29-29-101.

⁸⁰ Houston Police Department, HPD Immigration Policy Questions & Answers, accessed at http://www.houstontx.gov/police/pdfs/immigration_facts.pdf, accessed August 30, 2007.

⁸¹ P.L. 109-162; 119 Stat 2960.

⁸² LESC was established in 1994 and is administered by ICE. It operates 24 hours a day, seven days a week. LESC gathers information from eight databases and several law enforcement databases, including the NCIC. In July 2003, LESC processed 48,007 inquiries.

⁸³ Section 642(c) of IIRIRA required the former INS to respond to inquiries from local law enforcement agencies that sought to ascertain the immigration status of an individual within the jurisdiction of the agency for any purpose authorized under law.

⁸⁴ Absconders are unauthorized or criminal aliens or nonimmigrants who violated immigration law and have been ordered deported by an immigration court.

⁸⁵ Testimony of INS Commissioner James Zigler, in U.S. Congress, House Appropriations Committee, Subcommittee on Commerce, Justice, State and the Judiciary, Hearing on the President’s FY2003 Budget Request, March 7, 2002.

State and local law enforcement officials, however, have reported a variety of problems with accessing LESC and soliciting the help of federal immigration officials once it has been determined that an alien is unauthorized to be present in the country.⁸⁶ According to some state and local law enforcement officials, it can take several hours to get the results of a single query.⁸⁷ DHS, however, has reported that, on average, an immigrant status query takes 15 minutes.⁸⁸ State and local law enforcement officials have also reported that federal authorities rarely cooperate once they have been contacted by a state or local law enforcement entity.⁸⁹ Whatever the facts may be, there is a perception on the part of state and local law enforcement personnel that cooperation could be improved.

Civil Rights

One of the overriding concerns with state and local police involvement in the enforcement of immigration law is the potential for civil rights violations. A person is afforded certain civil rights under the Fifth Amendment, which guarantees that “no person shall ... be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without the due process of law ...,” and the Fourteenth Amendment, which prohibits a state from denying to “any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.” It should also be noted that courts have reviewed alleged police misconduct under the Fourth Amendment’s prohibition against unreasonable searches and seizures.

Congress has also statutorily prohibited certain discriminatory actions and has made available various remedies to victims of such discrimination. For example, Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 prohibits “discrimination under federally assisted programs on the grounds of race,” which can include federal and state law enforcement entities. 42 U.S.C. §1983, enacted as part of the Civil Rights Act of 1871, provides a monetary damages remedy for harm caused by deprivation of federal constitutional rights by state or local governmental officials. The Violent Crime and Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994 included a provision, 42 U.S.C. §14141, which authorizes the DOJ (but not private victims) to bring civil actions for equitable and declaratory relief against any police agency engaged in unconstitutional “patterns or practices.”

Because unauthorized aliens are likely to be members of minority groups, complications may arise in enforcing immigration law due to the difficulty in identifying illegal aliens while at the same time avoiding the appearance of discrimination based on ethnicity or alienage. Thus, a high risk for civil rights violations may occur if state and local police do not obtain the requisite knowledge, training, and experience in dealing with the enforcement of immigration laws. Moreover, suspects of immigration violations may become victims of “racial profiling”—the practice of targeting individuals for police or security detention based on their race or ethnicity in the belief that certain minority groups are more likely to engage in unlawful behavior or be present in the United States illegally. The prevalence of alleged civil rights violations and racial ⁸⁶ In some cases, local law enforcement may pick up an alien for questioning and determine that the alien could be released under normal circumstances, but because the alien has an illegal status, the officer should turn the alien over to federal authorities.

⁸⁷ U.S. Congress, House Subcommittee on Immigration, Border Security, and Claims, H.R. 2671, The Clear Law Enforcement for Criminal Alien Removal Act, 108th Cong., 1st sess., October 1, 2003.

⁸⁸ Congressional Research Service interview with an ICE congressional liaison and official in December 2003.

⁸⁹ Reportedly, this is more of a problem in rural areas where the closest immigration official may be in another state. U.S. Congress, House Subcommittee on Immigration, Border Security, and Claims, H.R. 2671, The Clear Law Enforcement for Criminal Alien Removal Act.

profiling among federal, state, and local law enforcement agencies has already received a significant amount of attention from the public and the courts.⁹⁰

Detention Space

The lack of sufficient beds to house immigration violators has been a long-standing problem. Some contend that a possible unintended consequence of permitting state and local law enforcement entities to enforce immigration law would lead to more aliens being detained, which could pose a resource problem for ICE. By increasing the number of law enforcement officers to enforce immigration law, they argue, inevitably more undocumented aliens would be detained. States and local jurisdictions already face some of the same challenges the federal government has been experiencing with respect to the lack of facilities to house criminal aliens and non-immigrants who violate immigration laws.⁹¹

Pro/Con Analysis of State and Local Law Enforcement Officials Enforcing Immigration Law

Determining what the proper role of state and local law enforcement officials is in enforcing immigration law is not without controversy. Lawmakers, scholars, observers and law enforcement officials have all expressed their opposition or support for increasing the role of state and local law enforcement with respect to enforcing immigration law. Following is a discussion of a few of the issues that have arisen in this debate.

Impact on Communities

Critics argue that utilizing state and local law enforcement to enforce immigration law would undermine the relationship between local law enforcement agencies and the communities they serve.⁹² For example, potential witnesses and victims of crime may be reluctant to come forward to report crimes in fear of actions that might be taken against them by immigration officials. They assert that the trust between immigrants and local authorities is tenuous in many jurisdictions and that such a policy could exacerbate the negative relationship.⁹³

Proponents contend, however, that state and local law enforcement officers would best be able to enforce such laws because they know the communities. They argue that state and local law enforcement officers already have the power to enforce criminal immigration violations and have ⁹⁰ See Department of Homeland Security Transition: Bureau of Immigration and Customs Enforcement: Hearing Before the Subcommittee on Immigration, Border Security, and Claims of the House Comm. on the Judiciary, 108th Cong. 66-69 (2003) (statement of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund wherein there were citations made various examples of racial profiling among federal and state officers).

⁹¹ For additional information on aliens in detention, see CRS Report RL31606, Detention of Noncitizens in the United States, by Alison Siskin and Margaret Mikyung Lee..

⁹² See for example the testimony of David Harris, Balk Professor of Law and Values, University of Toledo College of Law, from Senate Judiciary Committee, Subcommittee on Immigration, Border Security and Citizenship, State and Local Authority to Enforce Immigration Law: Evaluating a United Approach for Stopping Terrorists, April 22, 2004. Hereafter referred to as Harris' testimony.

⁹³ Ibid.

not seen a reluctance on the part of the communities they serve to cooperate in these investigations.

Resources

Opponents argue that state and local law enforcement resources should not be used to fund a federal responsibility. They contend that such action could result in the reduction of local law enforcement resources available for other purposes and constitute a cost shift onto state and local law enforcement agencies. According to some, local jurisdictions are already witnessing a depletion of traditional funding to fight crime. These critics also contend that there could be a de-emphasis on certain types of criminal investigations in an effort to focus on enforcing immigration law, which would divert law enforcement authorities' from their primary duties.

Proponents in favor of utilizing state and local law enforcement to enforce immigration law argue that such assistance would help the federal government to enforce the immigration law deeper into the interior of the United States. Moreover, they contend that local law enforcement agencies would bring additional resources to assist the federal government with enforcing immigration law.⁹⁴

National Security

As previously stated, since the 9/11 terrorist attacks, there has been increased emphasis placed on enforcing the nation's immigration laws. While the role of state and local law enforcement in enforcing immigration laws continues to be debated, critics maintain that by allowing state and local law enforcement to enforce such laws would undermine public safety and could force many undocumented aliens to go underground, thus making it more difficult to solicit their cooperation in criminal investigations, which could also include terrorist-related investigations.⁹⁵

Proponents, however, assert that permitting state and local law enforcement to enforce immigration law would make it easier to arrest potential terrorists and criminals who are illegally present in the country, thus providing an elevated level of security for the nation.⁹⁶

Training

As previously mentioned, the Secretary of DHS could enter into agreements with states and localities that would permit qualified officers to perform specified immigration-related duties. Since federal immigration law is a complex body of law, it requires extensive training and expertise to adequately enforce. Some argue that there are a variety of documents that allow someone to be legally present in the United States and state and local law enforcement officials do not have the necessary training on how to differentiate between those documents. Additionally, opponents maintain that the use of fraudulent documents is a growing problem and immigration

⁹⁴ See for example, Harris' testimony.

⁹⁵ Ibid.

⁹⁶ See for example the testimony of Kris Kobach, former counsel to the Attorney General, University of Missouri-Kansas City School of Law, from Senate Judiciary Committee, Subcommittee on Immigration, Border Security and Citizenship, State and Local Authority to Enforce Immigration Law: Evaluating a United Approach for Stopping Terrorists, April 22, 2004.

authorities must be familiar with the various techniques that are used to misrepresent a document.⁹⁷

Proponents contend that each 287g agreement is unique and the current training under the program is sufficient to adequately train state and local law enforcement officials to properly enforce immigration law.⁹⁸

Possible Policy Approaches

As Congress continues to debate the use of state and local law enforcement officers to enforce immigration law, it may want to consider several policy options, which may represent a choice among the options listed below or a combination. Congress may also choose to take no action, which could leave it to the courts to define these boundaries.

Direct Access to Databases

Under current practice, state and local law enforcement officials have indirect access to the immigration status of aliens through LESC and direct access to absconders through the FBI's NCIC. Some law enforcement officials argue that direct access to databases that contain information on the immigrant's status would assist them in carrying out their responsibilities more efficiently and effectively. Opponents, on the other hand, argue that providing state and local law enforcement officials with direct access to an alien's personal information could lead to abuse of such information by the law enforcement official. Some raise questions about the quality of the various databases and the potential for false positives, which could lead to the incarceration of innocent people. While there are critics on both sides of the issue, there may be a consensus that state and local law enforcement officials need access to certain information on aliens with whom they come into contact.

According to some, other issues arise when addressing state and local law enforcement's access to immigration databases: (1) how much access should be granted to state and local law enforcement officials; (2) who should have access to the databases; (3) what level of background clearance would be sufficient for the officers accessing the database; (4) what type of privacy protection should be given for individuals whose personal information is being accessed; and (5) how can the quality of the databases be improved to avoid potential problems such as "false positives" and individuals with similar names, which could potentially clog up the system.

Funding for State Cooperation

Congress could appropriate additional funding to state and local law enforcement agencies for their cooperation with enforcing immigration law.⁹⁹ A common argument made by local law enforcement officials against enforcing immigration law is the lack of resources.¹⁰⁰ Many states are facing budget crises and police departments have seen decreases in federal funding for some law enforcement programs.

⁹⁷ For additional information on immigration document fraud, see CRS Report RL34007, Immigration Fraud: Policies, Investigations, and Issues, by Ruth Ellen Wasem.

⁹⁸ See for example, <http://www.ice.gov/pi/news/factsheets/070622factsheet287gprogover.htm>, accessed on August 29, 2007.

⁹⁹ For FY2007, Congress appropriated $5 million for states and localities who enter into 287g agreements with DHS, see P.L. 109-90.

*State Criminal Alien Assistance Program (SCAAP)*¹⁰¹

Over the past several years, states and localities have seen a reduction in federal reimbursement for the SCAAP. SCAAP provides payment assistance to states and localities for the costs incurred for incarcerating undocumented aliens being held as a result of state or local charges.¹⁰² SCAAP funding was at a historical high in FY2002 when Congress appropriated $565 million for the program, and while it has received increased funding when compared to the previous year, its FY2007 appropriations of just under $400 million remains lower than its FY2002 peak.

Criminalizing Civil Immigration Violations

At the center of the current debate to permit state and local law enforcement to enforce immigration law is whether state and local law enforcement has the inherent authority to enforce civil immigration violations, such as a nonimmigrant who overstays his visa. While this issue still appears somewhat unclear from a legal perspective (see earlier discussion in “Authorities to Enforce Immigration Law” and “State Involvement in the Enforcement of Immigration Law”), by criminalizing all civil immigration violations, state and local law enforcement agencies could seemingly arrest and detain all immigration violators.

While some view this option as closing the existing loophole, others express concern that state and local law enforcement officials are not adequately trained to ascertain the difference between a bonafide asylum seeker and an individual who may be fraudulently trying to circumvent the system. Others express concern that the pool of violators is great (8 million or more undocumented aliens)¹⁰³ and the immigration system is already overburdened. Observers question that if civil immigration violations were to become criminal would it be retroactive, and if so to what date; and would it preempt aliens who have civil immigration violations from adjusting their status?

¹⁰⁰ Local law enforcement officials have also made other arguments against enforcing immigration law as discussed in “Pro/Con Analysis of State and Local Law Enforcement Officials Enforcing Immigration Law.”

¹⁰¹ For more information about this program, please refer to CRS Report RL33431, Immigration: Frequently Asked Questions on the State Criminal Alien Assistance Program (SCAAP), by Karma Ester.

¹⁰² Section 241 of the INA created SCAAP.

¹⁰³ The 2000 Census Bureau estimated that there are approximately 8 million undocumented aliens in the United States.

Appendix A. List of Law Enforcement Entities Participating in 287(g) Program

State	MOA Name	MOA Type	Signed Date
AL	AL State Police	Task Force	9/10/2003
AL	Etowah County Sheriff's Office	Detention	7/8/2008
AR	Benton County Sheriff's Office	Detention/Task Force	9/26/2007
AR	City of Springdale Police Department	Task Force	9/26/2007
AR	Rogers Police Department	Task Force	9/25/2007
AR	Washington County Sheriff's Office AR	Detention/Task Force	9/26/2007
AZ	AZ Department of Corrections	Detention	9/16/2005
AZ	AZ Department of Public Safety	Task Force	4/15/2007
AZ	City of Phoenix Police Department	Task Force	3/10/2008
AZ	Maricopa County Sheriff's Office	Detention/Task Force	2/7/2007
AZ	Pima County Sheriff's Office	Detention/Task Force	3/10/2008
AZ	Pinal County Sheriff's Office	Detention/Task Force	3/10/2008
AZ	Yavapai County Sheriff's Office	Detention/Task Force	3/10/2008
CA	Los Angeles County Sheriff's Office	Detention	2/1/2005
CA	Orange County Sheriff's Office	Detention	11/2/2006
CA	Riverside County Sheriff's Office	Detention	4/28/2006
CA	San Bernardino County Sheriff's Office	Detention	10/19/2005
CO	CO Department of Public Safety	Task Force	3/29/2007
CO	El Paso County Sheriff's Office	Detention	5/17/2007
FL	Bay County Sheriff's Office	Task Force	6/15/2008
FL	Brevard County Sheriff's Office	Detention	8/13/2008
FL	Collier County Sheriff's Office	Detention/Task Force	8/6/2007
FL	FL Department of Law Enforcement	Task Force	7/2/2002
FL	Jacksonville Sheriff's Office	Detention	7/8/2008
FL	Manatee County Sheriff's Office	Detention	7/8/2008
GA	Cobb County Sheriff's Office	Detention	2/13/2007
GA	GA Department of Public Safety	Task Force	7/27/2007
GA	Hall County Sheriff's Office	Detention/Task Force	2/29/2008
GA	Whitfield County Sheriff's Office	Detention	2/4/2008
MA	Barnstable County Sheriff's Office	Detention	8/25/2007
MA	Framingham Police Department	Task Force	8/14/2007
MA	MA Department of Corrections	Detention	3/26/2007
MD	Frederick County Sheriff's Office	Detention/Task Force	2/6/2008
MN	MN Department of Public Safety	Task Force	9/22/2008
MO	MO State Highway Patrol	Task Force	6/25/2008

State	MOA Name	MOA Type	Signed Date
NC	Alamance County Sheriff's Office	Detention	1/10/2007
NC	Cabarrus County Sheriff's Office	Detention	8/2/2007
NC	Cumberland County Sheriff's Office	Detention	6/25/2008
NC	Durham Police Department	Task Force	2/1/2008
NC	Gaston County Sheriff's Office	Detention	2/22/2007
NC	Henderson County Sheriff's Office	Detention	6/25/2008
NC	Mecklenburg County Sheriff's Office	Detention	2/27/2006
NC	Wake County Sheriff's Office	Detention	6/25/2008
NH	Hudson City Police Department	Task Force	5/5/2007
NJ	Hudson County Department of Corrections	Detention	8/11/2008
NM	NM Department of Corrections	Detention	9/17/2007
NV	Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Dept	Detention	9/8/2008
OH	Butler County Sheriff's Office	Detention/Task Force	2/5/2008
OK	Tulsa County Sheriff's Office	Detention/Task Force	8/6/2007
SC	Beaufort County Sheriff's Office	Task Force	6/25/2008
SC	York County Sheriff's Office	Detention	10/16/2007
TN	Davidson County Sheriff's Office	Detention	2/21/2007
TN	TN Department of Safety	Task Force	6/25/2008
TX	Carrollton Police Department	Detention	8/12/2008
TX	Farmers Branch Police Dept.	Task Force	7/8/2008
TX	Harris County Sheriff's Office	Detention	7/20/2008
UT	Washington County Sheriff's Office UT	Detention	9/22/2008
UT	Weber County Sheriff's Office	Detention	9/22/2008
VA	City of Manassas Police Department	Task Force	3/5/2008
VA	Herndon Police Department	Task Force	3/21/2007
VA	Loudoun County Sheriff's Office	Task Force	6/25/2008
VA	Manassas Park Police Department	Task Force	3/10/2008
VA	Prince William County Police Department	Task Force	2/26/2008
VA	Prince William County Sheriff's Office	Task Force	2/26/2008
VA	Prince William-Manassas Adult Detention Center	Detention	7/9/2007
VA	Rockingham County Sheriff's Office	Detention/Task Force	4/25/2007
VA	Shenandoah County Sheriff's Office	Detention/Task Force	5/10/2007

Source: CRS presentation of information provided in written testimony of Mr. William Riley, ICE. U.S. House Committee on Homeland Security, March 4, 2009.

Appendix B. Legislation in the 110th Congress

In the 110th Congress, a number of bills were introduced that would have provided state and local law enforcement officers immigration enforcement authorities or that would have otherwise supported the enforcement of immigration law by state and local law enforcement officers.

S. 1348, the Comprehensive Immigration Reform Act of 2007, included provisions concerning the state and local enforcement of immigration laws that were similar to those contained in the version of S. 2611 that passed the Senate in the 109th Congress (see Appendix C for a discussion of S. 2611 and other legislation in the 109th Congress). S.Amdt. 1150, the Secure Borders, Economic Opportunity, and Immigration Reform Act of 2007, which was proposed as a substitute to S. 1348, and S. 1639 contained similar provisions. Specifically, all three legislative proposals would have created a border relief grant program for eligible law enforcement agencies to address criminal activity that occurred near the border. Under the program, the Secretary of DHS would have been authorized to provide grants to law enforcement agencies located within 100 miles of the northern or southern border or to agencies outside 100 miles, located in areas certified as “high impact areas” by the Secretary.¹⁰⁴ S. 1348, S.Amdt. 1150, and S. 1369 would also have authorized DHS to reimburse state and local authorities for certain training, equipment, transportation, and incarceration costs related to immigration enforcement, and certain costs associated with processing criminal illegal aliens through the criminal justice system. Other provisions of these legislative proposals would have, among other things, required DHS to (1) verify the immigration status of aliens apprehended or arrested by local police; (2) take possession of illegal aliens within 72 hours after the local police apprehend an alien or complete the charging process; and (3) designate at least one federal, state or local prison, jail, private contracted prison or detention facility within each state as the central facility for that state to transfer custody of aliens to DHS.

Unlike S. 1639 and S.Amdt. 1150, S. 1348 as introduced also contained a provision reaffirming a state’s inherent authority to investigate, identify, apprehend, arrest, detain, or transfer into federal custody aliens in the United States, though this provision only concerns the enforcement of the criminal provisions of the INA. S. 1348 also contained a provision requiring the Secretary of DHS to provide specified information on certain aliens to the NCIC.¹⁰⁵

H.R. 842 would have given state and local law enforcement personnel the authority to investigate, identify, apprehend, arrest, detain, or transfer into federal custody aliens within the United States. State or local governments that continued to prohibit their law enforcement officers from assisting or cooperating with federal immigration law enforcement entities two years after the bill’s enactment would no longer have been eligible for funding under the State Criminal Alien Assistance Program. The bill would have required DHS to designate one detention facility within each state as a central facility for law enforcement entities within that state to place aliens. DHS would also have been required to take aliens into federal custody within 48 hours of their apprehension by state and local law enforcement officers.

¹⁰⁴ Title IX of the Senate-passed version of H.R. 5441, the FY2007 Department of Homeland Security Appropriations Act, would have created the same program. The House-passed version of H.R. 5441 did not contain such a grant program, and it was not included in the enacted measure (P.L. 109-295).

¹⁰⁵ Under S. 1348, DHS would be required to provide information to the NCIC on aliens who had: (1) been issued a final order of removal; (2) signed a voluntary departure agreement; (3) been subject to a voluntary departure agreement; (4) overstayed their authorized period of stay; and (5) a visa revoked. Similar provisions were contained in the legislation proposed in the 109th Congress, including Senate-passed S. 2611, the Comprehensive Immigration Reform Act of 2006, and House-passed H.R. 1279, the Gang Deterrence and Community Protection Act of 2005.

H.R. 1645 would have affirmed state and local law enforcement officers' right to enforce the criminal provisions of the INA in the normal course of carrying out their regular law enforcement duties.¹⁰⁶ The bill would also have created a Border Relief Grant Program to provide funding to state and local law enforcement agencies to address criminal activity within their jurisdiction relating to the lack of security at the border. Funding would have be available to all communities within 100 miles of the U.S. border and to some communities further than 100 miles from the border that had been designated as "High Impact Areas" by DHS.¹⁰⁷

H.R. 1962 would have authorize DHS to provide grants to units of local government to offset increasing expenses related to unauthorized aliens within their jurisdictions, including, among other things: law enforcement activities, inmate transportation, and reduction in jail populations.

¹⁰⁶ H.R. 1645, §215.

¹⁰⁷ H.R. 1645, §141.

Appendix C. Legislation in the 109th Congress

Several bills in the 109th Congress would have enhanced the role of state and local law enforcement agencies in the enforcement of immigration law. Only a few bills, however, passed their respective chambers, and no bill with significant local law enforcement measures in the immigration context was passed by the 109th Congress.¹⁰⁸ Most provisions affecting the role of state and local law enforcement were contained in Senate-passed S. 2611, the Comprehensive Immigration Reform Act of 2006, and House-passed H.R. 4437, the Border Protection, Antiterrorism, and Illegal Immigration Control Act of 2005. The following discusses in more detail H.R. 4437, S. 2611, and other bills that passed their chambers during the 109th Congress.

H.R. 4437, as passed by the House, would have “reaffirm[ed] the existing inherent authority of States,” as sovereign entities (including their law enforcement personnel), to investigate, identify, apprehend, arrest, detain, or transfer into federal custody aliens in the United States in the course of carrying out routine duties. Other provisions in H.R. 4437 would have authorized the Secretary of DHS to make grants to state and local police agencies for the procurement of equipment, technology, facilities, and other products that were directly related to the enforcement of immigration law. H.R. 4437 would have further allowed a state to reimburse itself with certain DHS grants for activities that were related to the enforcement of federal laws aimed at preventing the unlawful entry of persons or things into the United States and that were carried out under agreement with the federal government. H.R. 4437 would have also required designated sheriffs within 25 miles of the southern international border of the United States to be reimbursed or provided an advance for costs associated with the transfer of aliens detained or in the custody of the sheriff. The act would have also required DHS to establish a training manual and pocket guide for state and local law enforcement personnel with respect to enforcing immigration law.

Similar to H.R. 4437, the Department of Homeland Security Authorization Act for FY2006, H.R. 1817, as passed by the House, would have authorized state and local law enforcement personnel to apprehend, detain, or remove aliens in the United States in the course of carrying out routine duties. Likewise, it would have reaffirmed the existing general authority for state and local law enforcement personnel to carry out the activities mentioned above. No action was taken on H.R. 1817 in the Senate during the 109th Congress.

In the Senate, S. 2611 would have, among other things, reaffirmed the inherent authority of states to enforce the criminal provisions of the INA, reimbursed states and localities for various costs associated with the apprehension and detention of unauthorized aliens, and required DHS to promptly take into custody illegal aliens who had been apprehended by local authorities. As mentioned previously, the provisions contained in S. 2611 concerning state and local enforcement of immigration laws are largely identical to those found in S. 1348, the Comprehensive ¹⁰⁸ Several other pieces of legislation were introduced in the 109th Congress that would have enhanced the role of state and local law enforcement officials in the enforcement of immigration law, including the Clear Law Enforcement for Criminal Alien Removal Act of 2005, H.R. 3137; the Enforcement First Immigration Reform Act of 2005, H.R. 3938; the Rewarding Employers that Abide by the Law and Guaranteeing Uniform Enforcement to Stop Terrorism Act of 2005, H.R. 3333; the Homeland Security Enhancement Act of 2005, S. 1362; the Comprehensive Enforcement and Immigration Reform Act of 2005, S. 1438; and the Securing America’s Borders Act, S. 2454. Contrary to these bills, the Save America Comprehensive Immigration Act of 2005, H.R. 2092, would have limited the role of state and local law enforcement in immigration law.

Immigration Reform Act of 2007, which is currently being considered in the 110th Congress and is discussed in greater detail in the previous section.¹⁰⁹

Author Contact Information

Lisa M. Seghetti
Section Research Manager
lseggetti@crs.loc.gov, 7-4669

Karma Ester
Information Research Specialist
kester@crs.loc.gov, 7-3036

Michael John Garcia
Legislative Attorney
mgarcia@crs.loc.gov, 7-3873

¹⁰⁹ See supra at 23.