All visa services at the U.S. Embassy in Damascus have been suspended until further notice. The Embassy regrets the inconvenience this temporary suspension causes for persons wishing to visit or immigrate to the United States. The Embassy will commence visa operations gradually as circumstances permit.

The Embassy will continue to process the visa applications of anyone who was interviewed prior to the suspension of visa services.

Applicants who need to travel to the United States before resumption of full visa services in Damascus are welcome to apply for a nonimmigrant visa at any U.S. Embassy or consulate outside Syria which provides visa services. Information on the requirements for doing so and the locations of U.S. visa-issuing Embassies and consulates is available at www.travel.state.gov. The non-refundable MRV application fee must be paid in the country of application, according to procedures established by each U.S. Embassy or consulate.
