Dear President Biden and Secretary Mayorkas,

The 220 undersigned organizations write to express our deepest disappointment regarding the planned reopening of Moshannon Valley Correctional Center, a former Bureau of Prisons (BOP) jail, as an Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) detention center and the conversion and expansion of the Berks County ICE detention center to an adult facility for women. We call on you to:

- Immediately terminate the contracts signed last week with Clearfield County for the Moshannon Valley facility and Berks County for the Berks facility;
- Halt all other efforts to expand the ICE detention system through any new or extended ICE contracts;
- Apply the Executive Order on privately operated prisons to end immigration detention contracts with private prison companies and local governments; and
- Take significant steps to dismantle the system of mass immigrant incarceration and the use of detention for asylum processing.

President Biden promised to end for-profit detention, including for undocumented immigrants, and to bring justice and fairness to the immigration system.\(^1\) Instead, your administration is increasing the use of immigration detention and filling the private prison beds that criminal justice advocates have worked for years to empty with immigrants and asylum-seekers. We expect and demand more.

Opening Moshannon and Berks flies in the face of community efforts in Pennsylvania

ICE’s decision to open Moshannon Valley and convert Berks in Pennsylvania contradicts and undermines this administration’s commitments to reform and the efforts of community members in Pennsylvania. ICE appears to be trying to make up for other facility closures in the Northeast United States by making Pennsylvania an immigration prison hub. As more states and county governments take measures towards phasing out ICE detention, the administration should take the opportunity to release people and limit enforcement operations in response to public outcry, not allow ICE to expand to new regions. It is hard if not impossible for the civil rights community to take seriously this administration’s intentions for detention reform, when its actions so blatantly contradict them.

The reopening of Moshannon Valley and conversion of Berks comes on the heels of the closure of the York County Prison and ending the detention of families in Berks County—outcomes that community members and advocates have been working toward for years. We are appalled that ICE is moving to convert Berks to a facility for women rather than terminating the contract, despite the documented history of abuses against women detained there when it was a family detention center.

We are further alarmed at the decision to open Moshannon Valley as an ICE facility given reports of neglect and abuse when it was open as a BOP jail. When Moshannon Valley announced its closure at the peak of the COVID-19 pandemic, conditions deteriorated: lack of access to calls, no visitations from family members or attorneys, two slices of bread with peanut butter per day and a sandwich for dinner, forcing up to 70 people in one pod, no commissary or hygiene products for months, ongoing threats of abuse, and solitary confinement for anyone who spoke out. Queer and trans immigrants formerly detained at Moshannon Valley expressed that they faced constant attacks by guards due to their gender identities. One person formerly detained at Moshannon and currently in ICE detention shared the following:

“From February to March the conditions became deplorable... My experience in Moshannon correctional center is one I wish never to repeat again. Its austerity and indignation has affected me deeply and these wounds will take time and therapy to heal, but for now I must lick my wounds the best I can and carry on for I write this statement from an ICE facility and my fight for freedom is not yet won. It saddens me to hear that ICE wants to turn the recent shutdown prison into an ICE center.”

Expansion contradicts promises and further harms immigrant communities

Early this year, many of our organizations made clear our expectations that your administration would begin to turn back the injustices of the immigration system, including beginning to phase out the use of immigration detention by releasing people, shutting down detention centers and ending detention contracts. In May, Secretary Mayorkas announced the intention to end ICE contracts with Irwin County Detention Center in Georgia and the Bristol County Jail in Massachusetts. This was welcome news. However, the number of people in ICE detention has sky-rocketed since January, nearly doubling in July, primarily due to the administration’s decision to prioritize recent arrivals seeking safety at our borders as enforcement priorities.

The Biden Administration has also actively litigated against the closure of private prisons, as exemplified by this week’s 9th Circuit decision holding that a California law that phases out private detention facilities in the state, including immigration detention facilities, conflicts with federal law and cannot stand.

These decisions along with the planned opening of Moshannon, the conversion and expansion of Berks to an adult facility, and the proposed expansion of the El Paso Service Processing Center undermines any progress made with Irwin and Bristol and directly goes against President Biden’s promises and Secretary Mayrokas’ stated intentions to reduce reliance on immigration detention.

Expansion contradicts the President’s commitments regarding privately operated prisons

These contracts also present a clear moral and policy dilemma for the Biden administration given the White House’s efforts to phase out privately operated prisons. Civil rights groups welcomed President Biden’s executive order in January 2021 directing the Department of Justice (DOJ) to phase out its contracts with privately operated prisons--and specifically instructing DOJ not to renew contracts with privately operated criminal detention facilities. But the Executive Order did not apply to ICE detention facilities, an omission which 75 members of Congress warned about at the time\(^5\) and that is all the more glaring now that ICE is moving to directly contradict the spirit and intention of the executive order. Since then, ICE has extended contracts with private prisons in states that passed legislation aimed at closing out those facilities.\(^6\) Now, the Biden administration is poised to fill the very private prison beds emptied out by its own Executive Order with immigrants and asylum seekers.

The Moshannon Valley facility is a case in point. In January 2021, the GEO Group (GEO) announced that the BOP had declined to renew its contract for the Moshannon Valley Correctional Facility in Pennsylvania, which was expected to generate $42 million in annualized revenue. GEO then informed its investors that it expected to market the facility “to other federal and state agencies.”\(^7\) In September 2021, GEO announced that it would reopen the facility as an ICE detention facility.\(^8\) As the end dates for several U.S. Marshals Service (USMS) contracts draw near, GEO and CoreCivic are pushing similar efforts in other locations, including in Leavenworth, Kansas, Clay County, Indiana and Willacy County, Texas. The administration must reject these efforts.

Unfortunately, despite the intentions of criminal justice advocates inside and outside the administration, ICE’s irreparably flawed mass incarceration system remains fully intertwined with private prison companies. Under the Trump Administration and as of January 2020, 81 percent of people detained in ICE custody each day were held in facilities owned or operated by private prison corporations. This number remains virtually unchanged under the Biden Administration. As of September 2021, 79 percent of people detained each day in ICE custody are detained in private detention facilities.\(^9\)

Private prison companies continue to profit off of human misery. In the past several years, contracts for ICE detention made up approximately 25 percent of total revenue for both CoreCivic and GEO. These corporations earned approximately the same amount of revenue from ICE detention contracts as they earned from Department of Justice (BOP and USMS) contracts combined.\(^\text{10}\)

Detention is not necessary to reversing inhumane, racist border policies

We are unequivocal—we must welcome people seeking safety and protection at our borders without the use of immigration detention. Immigration detention is inherently harmful, abusive and unjust.\(^\text{11}\) It is also a costly, punitive approach that has proven unnecessary to ensuring immigrants are able to navigate the immigration system. Studies show that most people are best able to see through their proceedings when in community and with access to proper support and legal representation.\(^\text{12}\)

Yet like its predecessors, the Biden administration has made detention central to its response to migration, including to people seeking asylum at our borders. This is a choice. There is no reason to detain people seeking asylum and further traumatize these individuals, many of whom have already experienced torture and persecution.\(^\text{13}\) Asylum seekers and others seeking safety at our borders have become the target of racist rhetoric and abuse in recent years, including most recently the abuse and deportation of Haitian migrants.\(^\text{14}\) The Biden administration must not advance these false narratives to legitimize further investment in the unjust and abusive immigration detention system.

It is not too late to reverse course. We urge you to cancel ICE’s contracts for Moshannon Valley and Berks, halt all expansion efforts underway and place a moratorium on any new or extended ICE detention contracts. Furthermore, we request you meet with immigration advocates to discuss ways to meaningfully incorporate immigration detention into implementation of the executive order on privately operated prisons. Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,
