

United States District Court
Northern District of California

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

INNOVATION LAW LAB, et al.,
Plaintiffs,
v.
KIRSTJEN NIELSEN, et al.,
Defendants.

Case No. 19-cv-00807-RS

ORDER GRANTING MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

I. INTRODUCTION

In January of this year, the Department of Homeland Security (“DHS”) began implementing a new policy regarding non-Mexican asylum seekers arriving in the United States from Mexico.¹ Denominated the “Migrant Protection Protocols” (“MPP”), the policy calls for such persons, with certain exceptions, to be “returned to Mexico for the duration of their immigration proceedings,” rather than either being detained for expedited or regular removal proceedings, or issued notices to appear for regular removal proceedings. This case presents two basic questions: (1) does the Immigration and Nationalization Act authorize DHS to carry out the return policy of ¹ The policy is administered by DHS sub-agencies Citizenship and Immigration Services (“CIS”), Customs and Border Protection (“CBP”), and Immigration and Customs Enforcement (“ICE”). The defendants named in this action are those agencies, and certain of their officials (collectively “DHS” or “the Government”).

1 the MPP, and; (2) even assuming Congress has authorized such returns in general, does the MPP
2 include sufficient safeguards to comply with DHS’s admitted legal obligation not to return any 3 alien to a territory where his or her “life or freedom would be threatened”? In support of their 4 motion for a preliminary injunction, the plaintiffs have sufficiently shown the answer to both 5 questions is “no.”

6 First, the statute that vests DHS with authority in some circumstances to return certain 7 aliens to a “contiguous territory” cannot be read to apply to the individual plaintiffs or others
8 similarly situated. Second, even assuming the statute could or should be applied to the individual
9 plaintiffs, they have met their burden to enjoin the MPP on grounds that it lacks sufficient 10 protections against aliens being returned to places where they face undue risk to their lives or 11 freedom. Accordingly, plaintiffs’ motion for a preliminary injunction will be granted.²

12 To be clear, the issue in this case is not whether it would be permissible for Congress to 13 authorize DHS to return aliens to Mexico pending final determinations as to their admissibility.
14 Nor does anything in this decision imply that DHS would be unable to exercise any such authority
15 in a legal manner should it provide adequate safeguards. Likewise, the legal question is not 16 whether the MPP is a wise, intelligent, or humane policy, or whether it is the best approach for 17 addressing the circumstances the executive branch contends constitute a crisis. Policy decisions 18 remain for the political branches of government to make, implement, and enforce.

19 Rather, this injunction turns on the narrow issue of whether the MPP complies with the 20 Administrative Procedures Act (“APA”). The conclusion of this order is only that plaintiffs are 21 likely to show it does not, because the statute DHS contends the MPP is designed to enforce does 22 not apply to these circumstances, and even if it did, further procedural protections would be 23 required to conform to the government’s acknowledged obligation to ensure aliens are not 24 returned to unduly dangerous circumstances.

25 _____
26 ² Plaintiffs’ motion was filed as an application for a temporary restraining order. In response to a 27 court scheduling order, the parties stipulated to deem plaintiffs’ motion as one for a preliminary 28 injunction, which now has been fully briefed and heard.

1 Furthermore, nothing in this order obligates the government to release into the United
2 States any alien who has not been legally admitted, pursuant to a fully-adjudicated asylum
3 application or on some other basis. DHS retains full statutory authority to detain all aliens pending
4 completion of either expedited or regular removal proceedings. See Jennings v. Rodriguez, 138 S.
5 Ct. 830 (2018).

6 7 II. BACKGROUND

8 In December of 2018, the Secretary of the DHS, Kirstjen Nielsen, announced adoption of 9 the MPP, which she described as a “historic action to confront illegal immigration.” See December
10 20, 2018 press release, “Secretary Kirstjen M. Nielsen Announces Historic Action to Confront 11 Illegal Immigration,” Administrative Record (“AR”) 16-18. DHS explained that pursuant to the 12 MPP, “the United States will begin the process of invoking Section 235(b)(2)(C) of the 13 Immigration and Nationality Act.” Id. DHS asserted that under the claimed statutory authority, 14 “individuals arriving in or entering the United States from Mexico—illegally or without proper 15 documentation—may be returned to Mexico for the duration of their immigration proceedings.”
16 Id.

17 In January of 2019, DHS issued a further press release regarding the implementation of the 18 MPP. See “Migrant Protection Protocols,” AR 11-15. In a paragraph entitled “What Gives DHS 19 the Authority to Implement MPP?” the press release asserts:

20 Section 235 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) addresses
21 the inspection of aliens seeking to be admitted into the U.S. and 22 provides specific procedures regarding the treatment of those not 23 clearly entitled to admission, including those who apply for asylum.
24 Section 235(b)(2)(C) provides that “in the case of an alien . . . who 25 is arriving on land (whether or not at a designated port of arrival)
26 from a foreign territory contiguous to the U.S.,” the Secretary of 27 Homeland Security “may return the alien to that territory pending a 28 [removal] proceeding under § 240” of the INA.

26 The positions taken in press releases reflect contemporaneous policy memoranda. On 27 January 25, 2018, Secretary Nielsen issued a memorandum stating:

1 [T]he United States will begin the process of implementing Section
2 235(b)(2)(C) . . . with respect to non-Mexican nationals who may be
3 arriving on land (whether or not at a designated port of entry)
4 seeking to enter the United States from Mexico illegally or without 5 proper documentation.

6 DHS Memorandum, AR 7-10; see also CIS Policy Memorandum, January 28, 2019, “Guidance
7 for Implementing Section 235(b)(2)(C) of the Immigration and Nationality Act and the Migrant 8 Protection Protocols. AR 2271-2275.

9 Thus, it is undisputed that the MPP represents a legal exercise of defendants’ authority
10 regarding treatment of alien applicants for admission if and only if section 235(b)(2)(C) of the 11 Immigration and Nationality Act applies to the individual plaintiffs and those similarly situated.
12 Section 235(b)(2)(C) is codified at 8 U.S.C. §1225(b)(2)(C) and will hereafter be referred to as the 13 “contiguous territory return provision.”

14 It is similarly undisputed that prior to adoption of the MPP, aliens applying for asylum at a 15 port of entry on the U.S.-Mexico border were either placed in expedited removal proceedings
16 pursuant subparagraph (1) of 8 U.S.C. §1225(b), or in defendants’ discretion were placed in 17 regular removal proceedings described in 8 U.S.C. §1229a. There also is no apparent dispute that 18 aliens placed directly into regular removal proceedings frequently were permitted to remain in the 19 United States during the pendency of those proceedings, and were not detained in custody. In 20 announcing the MPP, Secretary Nielsen asserted the new policy is intended to address a purported 21 problem of aliens “trying to game the system” by making groundless asylum claims and then
22 “disappear[ing] into the United States, where many skip their court dates.” See December 20, 2018
23 press release, AR 16.

24 Although the contiguous territory return provision has existed in the statute for many 25 years, the extent to which it has previously been utilized is unclear in the present record. While the 26 provision theoretically could be applied with respect to aliens arriving from either Mexico or 27 Canada, the focus of the MPP is aliens transiting through Mexico, who originated from other 28 countries. When this suit was filed, the MPP had been implemented only at the San Ysidro port of

1 entry on the California-Mexico border. Defendants have since advised that it has now been
2 extended to the Calexico port of entry, also on the California-Mexico border, and to El Paso,
3 Texas. Indications are that it will be further extended unless enjoined.

4 The CIS Policy Memorandum providing guidance for implementing the MPP specifically 5 addresses the issue of aliens who might face persecution if returned to Mexico. Under that 6 guidance, aliens who, unprompted, express a fear of return to Mexico during processing will be 7 referred to an asylum officer for interview. CIS Policy Memorandum, AR 2273. The asylum
8 officer's determination, however, is not reviewable by an immigration judge. Id at 2274. Although 9 DHS insists this policy satisfies all obligations the United States has under domestic and 10 international law to avoid "refoulement"—the forcible return of prospective asylum seekers to 11 places where they may be persecuted—there is no dispute that the procedural protections are less
12 robust than those available in expedited removal proceedings, or those that apply when a decision
13 is made that an alien is subject to removal at the conclusion of regular removal proceedings.

14 Plaintiffs in this action are eleven individuals who were "returned" to Mexico under the 15 MPP, and six non-profit organizations that provide legal services and advocacy related to 16 immigration issues.³ Plaintiffs' claims in this action are brought under the Administrative 17 Procedures Act and international law, although the preliminary injunction is sought only under the 18 former.

19 20 III. LEGAL STANDARD

21 A. Injunctions

22 An application for preliminary injunctive relief requires the plaintiff to "establish that he is 23 likely to succeed on the merits, that he is likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of 24 preliminary relief, that the balance of equities tips in his favor, and that an injunction is in the 25

26 _____
27 ³ The unopposed motion of the individual plaintiffs to proceed in this litigation under pseudonyms
28 (Dkt. No. 4) is granted.

1 public interest.” Winter v. N.R.D.C., Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 21-22 (2008). The Ninth Circuit has 2 clarified, however, that courts in this Circuit should still evaluate the likelihood of success on a
 3 “sliding scale.” Alliance for Wild Rockies v. Cottrell, 632 F.3d 1127, 1134 (9th Cir. 2011) (“[T]he
 4 ‘serious questions’ version of the sliding scale test for preliminary injunctions remains viable after 5 the Supreme Court’s decision in Winter.”). As quoted in Cottrell, that test provides that, “[a]
 6 preliminary injunction is appropriate when a plaintiff demonstrates . . . that serious questions
 7 going to the merits were raised and the balance of hardships tips sharply in the plaintiff’s favor,”
 8 provided, of course, that “plaintiffs must also satisfy the other [Winter] factors” including the 9 likelihood of irreparable harm. Id. at 1135.

11 B. The APA

12 Under section 706 of the APA, a reviewing court must “hold unlawful and set aside agency
 13 action, findings, and conclusions found to be . . . arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, or 14 otherwise not in accordance with law; contrary to constitutional right, power, privilege, or 15 immunity; in excess of statutory jurisdiction, authority, or limitations, or short of statutory right;
 16 [or] without observance of procedure required by law.” 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A)-(D). Accordingly, 17 the decision-making process that ultimately leads to the agency action must be “logical and 18 rational.” Allentown Mack Sales & Serv., Inc. v. NLRB, 522 U.S. 359, 374 (1998). Courts should 19 be careful, however, not to substitute their own judgment for that of the agency. Suffolk Cty. v.
 20 Sec’y of Interior, 562 F.2d 1368, 1383 (2d Cir. 1977). Ultimately, a reviewing court may uphold 21 agency action “only on the grounds that the agency invoked when it took the action.” Michigan v.
 22 EPA, 135 S. Ct. 2699, 2710 (2015). Post hoc rationalizations may not be considered. American
 23 Textile Mfrs. Inst., Inc. v. Donovan, 452 U.S. 490, 539 (1981). In evaluating APA claims, courts
 24 typically limit their review to the Administrative Record existing at the time of the decision. Sw.
 25 Ctr. for Biological Diversity v. U.S. Forest Service, 100 F.3d 1443, 1450 (9th Cir. 1996); accord
 26 Ranchers Cattlemen Action Legal Fund United Stockgrowers of Am. v. U.S. Dep’t of Agric., 499

1 F.3d 1108, 1117 (9th Cir. 2007).⁴

2
3 IV. DISCUSSION

4 A. Justiciability

5 At the threshold, defendants oppose plaintiffs' motion for preliminary relief by arguing 6 their claims simply are not justiciable. Defendants advance several interrelated points. First,
7 defendants contend the central issue is fundamentally one of prosecutorial discretion, and 8 therefore immune from judicial review. Were plaintiffs in fact challenging a policy decision to 9 place them in regular removal proceedings as opposed to expedited removal proceedings, that 10 argument might be viable.

11 As discussed below, however, plaintiffs concede DHS has such discretion, and none of 12 their claims in this action rest on a contrary position. Rather, the complaint here alleges the statute
13 on which defendants rely simply does not confer on DHS the powers it claims to be exercising
14 under the MPP. While defendants are free to argue they have discretion under the statute to adopt 15 and enforce the MPP, whether or not they actually do is a justiciable question.

16 Next, defendants contend several different sections of the INA preclude judicial review.
17 Defendants first cite 8 U.S.C. § 1252(g), which provides that "[e]xcept as provided in this section .
18 . . . no court shall have jurisdiction to hear any cause or claim by or on behalf of any alien arising 19 from the decision or action by the [Secretary] to commence proceedings." Defendants argue that 20 provision is "designed to give some measure of protection to . . . discretionary determinations"

21 _____
22 ⁴ Here, plaintiffs submit substantial evidence outside the administrative record, which 23 defendants move to strike and which plaintiffs move separately to deem admitted. The parties
24 agree extra-record evidence is admissible for limited purposes, including to support standing or a 25 showing of irreparable harm. Plaintiffs stipulate to having the present motion adjudicated based 26 on the administrative record presented by defendants, without waiving their right to challenge the 27 completeness of that record at a later juncture. This order relies only on matters in the 28 administrative record or which the parties otherwise agree may be considered. Further rulings on specific aspects of the motions to strike and to admit accordingly need not be addressed at this juncture.

1 like “the initiation or prosecution of various stages in the deportation process,” and so bars claims
2 “attempt[ing] to impose judicial constraints upon prosecutorial discretion.” Reno v. Am.-Arab
3 Anti-Discrimination Comm., 525 U.S. 471, 485 n.9 (1999). This argument, however, turns on the 4 conclusion that if DHS has discretion to apply the contiguous return provision to persons in the 5 circumstances of the individual plaintiffs, its decisions to return or not return any particular alien 6 under any such authority, might not be subject to review.

7 Defendants next invoke 8 U.S.C. § 1252(a), which provides, in part, “[n]otwithstanding
8 any other provision of law,” “no court shall have jurisdiction to review . . . any other decision or 9 action of the . . . Secretary of Homeland Security the authority for which is specified under this 10 subchapter to be in the discretion of the . . . Secretary.” As defendants admit, however, this 11 provision applies when the relevant decision is “specified by statute to be in the discretion of the”
12 the Secretary. Kucana v. Holder, 558 U.S. 233, 248 (2010). The very point of dispute in this 13 action is whether section 1225(b)(2)(C) applies such that DHS has such discretion, or not. That 14 threshold question is justiciable.

15 Defendants further argue 8 U.S.C. § 1252(a) and (e) jointly preclude review. As noted,
16 §1252(a) does not foreclose examination of whether application of the contiguous territory return
17 provision to the named plaintiffs is legally correct. Defendants also assert section 1252(a)(2)(A)
18 provides that no court shall have jurisdiction, except as permitted in section 1252(e), to review
19 “procedures and policies adopted by the [Secretary] to implement the provisions of section 20 1225(b)(1).” To the extent that is a new argument, it fails because plaintiffs in this action are not 21 challenging the discretionary decision to refrain from placing them in expedited removal under 22 1225(b)(1), and are instead litigating what the consequences of placing them in section 1229a 23 proceedings should or should not be.

24 The final issue is the potential applicability of section 1252(e)(3). That subparagraph 25 provides no court, other than the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, has 26 jurisdiction to review “determinations under section 1225(b) of this title and its implementation,” 27 including “whether such a . . . written policy directive, written policy guideline, or written 28

1 procedure issued by or under the authority of the [Secretary] to implement such section, is not
2 consistent with applicable provisions of this subchapter or is otherwise in violation of law.” 8
3 U.S.C. § 1252(e)(3)(A). On its face, this provision arguably requires plaintiffs’ claims to proceed
4 exclusively in the District of Columbia. In light of that concern, the parties were invited to provide 5 further briefing after the hearing on the motion for preliminary relief. See Dkt. No. 68.

6 Plaintiffs argue section 1252(e)(3) is intended only to invest jurisdiction in the district
7 court of the District of Columbia to hear systemic challenges specifically addressing the expedited
8 removal scheme. Thus, plaintiffs argue, the provision’s reference to “determinations under section 9 1225(b) of this title and its implementation,” rather than “determinations under section
10 1225(b)(1)” should be seen as nothing more than a “scrivener’s error.”

11 The question is close, because section 1252(e)(3) otherwise would appear to describe the 12 issues presented in this case quite well. As noted, it expressly refers to review of issues such as,
13 “whether such a regulation, or a written policy directive, written policy guideline, or written 14 procedure issued by or under the authority of the Attorney General to implement such section, is 15 not consistent with applicable provisions of this subchapter or is otherwise in violation of law.”
16 That lines up neatly with the main thrust of plaintiffs’ argument here—that contrary to defendants’
17 claim the MPP merely addresses when discretion should be exercised to apply the contiguous
18 territory return provision, by definition the provision in fact does not apply to plaintiffs.

19 Nevertheless, plaintiffs have the better argument that section 1252(e)(3) should not be read
20 to require them to bring these claims in the District of Columbia. Although statutory titles and 21 headings are not dispositive, they are instructive. See Fla. Dep’t of Revenue v. Piccadilly
22 Cafeterias, Inc., 554 U.S. 33, 47, 128 S. Ct. 2326 (2008) (“To be sure, a subchapter heading
23 cannot substitute for the operative text of the statute . . . [T]he title of a statute . . . cannot limit the 24 plain meaning of the text. Nonetheless, statutory titles and section headings are tools available for 25 the resolution of a doubt about the meaning of a statute.”)(internal quotations and citations 26 omitted).

27 Here, section 1252 as a whole is entitled, “Judicial review of orders of removal,” and most 28

1 of its provisions are focused on issues relating to review of individual decisions to remove an
 2 alien. More to the point in question here, subparagraph (e) is entitled “Judicial review of orders
 3 under section 1225(b)(1)” (emphasis added). Other sub-subparagraphs of (e) explicitly indicate 4 that they are applicable to challenges to determinations made under 1225(b)(1). See
 5 §1252(e)(1)(A) (“ . . . in accordance with section 1225(b)(1)”); §1252(e)(2) (“any determination
 6 made under section 1225(b)(1)”); §1252(e)(4)(A) (“ . . . an alien who was not ordered
 7 removed under section 1225(b)(1) of this title”); §1252(e)(5) (“ . . . an alien has been ordered 8 removed under section 1225(b)(1) of this title”).

9 Given that sub-subparagraphs (1), (2), (4), and (5) of 8 U.S.C §1252(e) all expressly 10 invoke section 1225(b)(1), the mere fact that §1252(e)(3) fails to state “1225(b)(1)” instead of 11 only “1225(b)” is too thin a reed on which to conclude that jurisdiction of this action lies 12 exclusively in the federal court of the District of Columbia. The omission of “(1)” may or may not 13 constitute a “scrivener’s error,” in the traditional sense of that phrase, but it is not a basis to 14 disregard the clear import of the structure of section 1252 and subparagraph (e).

15 Challenges to “validity of the system” undeniably are subject to section 1252(e)(3), and 16 therefore arguably subject to exclusive jurisdiction in the District of Columbia.⁵ In context,
 17 however, “the system” should be understood as a reference to the expedited removal procedure
 18 authorized under section 1225(b)(1). There can be no dispute that this action is not a challenge to 19 that “system.” Rather, plaintiffs acknowledge both that they are subject to expedited removal and 20 that DHS has discretion to place them instead into regular removal proceedings under 8 U.S.C.
 21 §1229a. Indeed, in essence, plaintiffs are arguing that because they are subject to expedited
 22 removal, they should at a minimum have the protections they would enjoy under that regime,
 23 either by being exempt from contiguous territorial return, and/or by having additional procedural 24 and substantive protections against being sent to places in which they would not be safe from

25 _____
 26 ⁵ Plaintiffs contend that even where section 1252(e)(3) applies and permits jurisdiction in the 27 District of Columbia, it does not preclude jurisdiction elsewhere. While that proposition appears 28 dubious at best, the question need not be decided here.

1 persecution.

2 Accordingly, this action is not a challenge to the “system” of expedited removal. Given the 3 overall structure of section 1252(e), the most reasonable construction of subparagraph (3) is that it
 4 applies only to such challenges. See Porter v. Nussle, 534 U.S. 516, 528, 122 S.Ct. 983 (2002).
 5 (“The placement of §1146(a) within a subchapter expressly limited to postconfirmation matters
 6 undermines Piccadilly’s view that §1146(a) covers preconfirmation transfers.”). As a result,
 7 whether presented as a jurisdictional issue or one of venue, 8 U.S.C. §1252(e)(3) is not a bar to the 8 particular claims plaintiffs present in this forum.⁶

9
 10 B. Standing

11 In a footnote, defendants assert “[t]he organizational Plaintiffs lack standing because they 12 lack a ‘judicially cognizable interest in the prosecution or nonprosecution of another.’” Opposition
 13 at 10, n. 5. (quoting Linda R.S. v. Richard D., 410 U.S. 614, 619 (1973)). Defendants concede, 14 however, that their standing arguments are foreclosed by the holding in East Bay Sanctuary
 15 Covenant v. Trump, 909 F.3d 1219, 1240 (9th Cir. 2018), where the Ninth Circuit held that 16 similarly situated organizational plaintiffs have organizational standing premised on a diversion of 17 resources caused by the challenged government actions. See id. at 1242.

18 Defendants state they “respectfully disagree with that ruling” and question standing only to 19 preserve their rights on appeal. Nevertheless, to the extent defendants argue East Bay Sanctuary is 20 factually distinguishable, their position is not persuasive. It is true, as defendants point out, that 21 East Bay involved a different statutory provision, and that standing may turn on whether a plaintiff

22
 23 _____
 24 ⁶ Defendants also seek a discretionary transfer under 28 U.S.C. §1404 to the Southern District of 25 California. Although the MPP was first implemented at a border crossing point in that district, 26 defendants have not shown that the balance of factors applicable under §1404 warrant a transfer.
 27 Plaintiffs’ choice of forum is supported by the institutional plaintiffs’ presence in this district and 28 is therefore entitled to deference. The issues in the litigation largely involve legal questions not tied to any district and/or federal policy decisions not made in or limited to the Southern District of California. The motion to transfer is therefore denied.

1 is “arguably within the zone of interests to be protected or regulated by the statute . . . in 2 question.” Clarke v. Sec. Indus. Ass’n, 479 U.S. 388, 396 (1987). Nevertheless, the 3 organizational plaintiffs have made a showing that is stronger, if anything, than that in East Bay
 4 Sanctuary. Plaintiffs’ organizational standing in that case was premised on various broad
 5 “diversion of resources” arguments and the potential loss of funding. See, e.g., 909 F.3d at 1242
 6 (“The Organizations have also offered uncontradicted evidence that enforcement of the Rule has 7 required, and will continue to require, a diversion of resources, independent of expenses for this
 8 litigation, from their other initiatives.”) Here, the organizational plaintiffs have made a showing 9 that the challenged policy directly impedes their mission, in that it is manifestly more difficult to 10 represent clients who are returned to Mexico, as opposed to being held or released into the United 11 States. Additionally, there is no suggestion by defendants that the individual plaintiffs lack 12 standing. Accordingly, to whatever extent defendants may have challenged standing, there is no
 13 basis to preclude preliminary relief on such grounds.⁷

14
 15 C. Showing on the merits

16 1. Structure of 8 U.S.C. §1225

17 The statute at the center of this action is 8 U.S.C. §1225, which is entitled, “Inspection by 18 immigration officers; expedited removal of inadmissible arriving aliens; referral for hearing.”
 19 Paragraph (a) of the statute provides generally that aliens who are arriving in the United States, or 20 who have not already been admitted, are deemed to be applicants for admission and that they 21 “shall be inspected by immigration officers.”⁸ Paragraph (b) then divides such applicants for 22 admission into two categories.

23 Subparagraph (b)(1) is entitled, “[i]nspection of aliens arriving in the United States and 24

25 ⁷ Furthermore, defendants have not challenged the standing of the individual plaintiffs to bring 26 these claims or to seek preliminary relief.

27 ⁸ For clarity, all statutory exceptions that are not applicable to plaintiffs and that are not relevant to 28 the statutory construction analysis will be omitted from quotations and the discussion in this order.

1 certain other aliens who have not been admitted or paroled.” It provides, in short, that aliens who 2 arrive in the United States without specified identity and travel documents, or who have 3 committed fraud in connection with admission, are to be “removed from the United States without 4 further hearing or review” unless they apply for asylum or assert a fear of persecution. 8 U.S.C.
 5 §1225(b)(1)(A)(i). This procedure is known as “expedited removal.”⁹

6 Subparagraph (b)(1) provides that aliens who indicate either an intention to apply for 7 asylum or a fear of persecution are to be referred to an asylum officer for an interview.
 8 §1225(b)(1)(A)(ii). The officer is to make a written record of any determination that the alien has 9 not shown a credible fear. §1225(b)(1)(B)(iii)(II). The record is to include a summary of the 10 material facts presented by the alien, any additional facts relied upon by the officer, and the 11 officer’s analysis of why, in the light of such facts, the alien has not established a credible fear of 12 persecution. Id.

13 The alien in that scenario is entitled to review by an immigration judge of any adverse 14 decision, including an opportunity for the alien to be heard and questioned by the immigration
 15 judge, either in person or by telephonic or video connection. §1225(b)(1)(B)(iii)(II). Additionally,
 16 aliens are expressly entitled to receive information concerning the asylum interview and to consult 17 with a person or persons of the alien’s choosing prior to the interview and any review by an 18 immigration judge. §1225(b)(1)(B)(iv). Thus, an alien processed for “expedited” removal under 19 subparagraph (b)(1) still has substantial procedural safeguards against being removed to a place
 20 where he or she may face persecution.

21 Subparagraph (b)(2) is entitled, “[i]nspection of other aliens” (emphasis added). It provides 22 that aliens seeking admission are “to be detained for a proceeding under section 1229a of [Title
 23 8]” unless they are “clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be admitted.” §1225(b)(2)(A). Section 24

25 ⁹ Subparagraph (b)(1) also expressly gives defendants discretion to apply expedited removal to 26 aliens already present in the United States who have not been legally admitted or paroled, if they 27 are unable to prove continuous presence in the country for more than two years.
 28 §1225(b)(1)(A)(iii).

1 1229a, in turn, is entitled “Removal proceedings” and sets out the procedures under which 2 immigration judges generally “conduct proceedings for deciding the inadmissibility or 3 deportability of an alien.” 8 U.S.C. § 1229a (a)(1).

4 Section 1225 subparagraph (b)(2)(B) expressly provides that (b)(2)(A) “shall not apply to 5 an alien . . . to whom paragraph (1) applies.” Thus, on its face, section 1225 divides applicants for 6 admission into two mutually exclusive categories. Subparagraph (b)(1) addresses aliens who are 7 subject to expedited removal. Subparagraph (b)(2) addresses those who are either clearly and 8 beyond a doubt entitled to admission, or whose application for admission will be evaluated by an 9 administrative law judge in section 1229a proceedings if they are not.

10 Although not expressly addressing mutual exclusivity of the two categories, the Supreme 11 Court has described the operation of section 1225 similarly:

12 [A]pplicants for admission fall into one of two categories, those 13 covered by § 1225(b)(1) and those covered by § 1225(b)(2). Section
 14 1225(b)(1) applies to aliens initially determined to be inadmissible
 15 due to fraud, misrepresentation, or lack of valid documentation. See 16 § 1225(b)(1)(A)(i) (citing §§ 1182(a)(6)(C), (a)(7)) Section
 17 1225(b)(2) is broader. It serves as a catchall provision that applies to 18 all applicants for admission not covered by § 1225(b)(1).

19 Jennings v. Rodriguez, 138 S. Ct. 830, 837 (2018).

20 As set out above, there is no dispute that the MPP purports to be an implementation of the 21 contiguous territory return provision, which appears in the statute as a sub-subparagraph under 22 subparagraph (b)(2). The provision states, in full:

23 In the case of an alien described in subparagraph (A) who is arriving 24 on land (whether or not at a designated port of arrival) from a
 25 foreign territory contiguous to the United States, the Attorney
 26 General may return the alien to that territory pending a proceeding
 27 under section 1229a of this title.

28 8 U.S.C. §1225(b)(2)(C).¹⁰

¹⁰ Plaintiffs’ complaint includes an assertion that the contiguous territory return provision may

1 On its face, therefore, the contiguous territory return provision may be applied to aliens
2 described in subparagraph (b)(2)(A). Pursuant to subparagraph (b)(2)(B), however, that expressly
3 excludes any alien “to whom paragraph (1) applies.”

4
5 2. Application of the contiguous territory return provision to the individual plaintiffs

6 At least for purposes of this motion, there is no dispute that the individual plaintiffs are 7 asylum seekers who lack valid admission documents, and who therefore ordinarily would be 8 subject to expedited removal proceedings under subparagraph (1) of section 1225. Applying the 9 plain language of the statute, they simply are not subject to the contiguous territory return
10 provision.

11 Defendants advance three basic arguments to contend the plain language should not apply
12 and that therefore the MPP represents a legal exercise of DHS’s authority under the contiguous
13 return provision. First, defendants rely on well-established law, conceded by plaintiffs, that DHS
14 has prosecutorial discretion to place aliens in regular removal proceedings under section 1229a
15 notwithstanding the fact that they would qualify for expedited removal under subparagraph (b)(1).
16 Indeed, defendants are correct that the apparently mandatory language of subparagraph (b)(1)—
17 “the officer shall order the alien removed from the United States without further hearing or review 18”—does not constrain DHS’s discretion.

19 In Matter of E-R-M- & L-R-M, 25 I. & N. Dec. 520 (BIA 2011) the Board of Immigration
20 Appeals rejected a contention that aliens subject to expedited removal could not be placed directly 21 into 1229a proceedings instead.

22
23
24 lawfully be applied only to aliens who are “from” the contiguous territory. Complaint, para. 149.
25 It may be the individual plaintiffs contend they are not subject to the provision because they are 26 “from” countries other than Mexico. Plaintiffs did not advance this point in briefing, and it is not 27 compelling. The statute refers to aliens “arriving on land . . . from a foreign territory contiguous to 28 the United States.” This language plainly describes the alien’s entry point, not his or her country of origin.

1 [W]e observe that the issue arises in the context of a purported
2 restraint on the DHS’s exercise of its prosecutorial discretion. In that
3 context, we find that Congress’ use of the term “shall” in section
4 235(b) (1) (A) (i) of the Act does not carry its ordinary meaning,
5 namely, that an act is mandatory. It is common for the term “shall”
6 to mean “may” when it relates to decisions made by the Executive 7 Branch of the Government on whether to charge an individual and 8 on what charge or charges to bring.

9 25 I. & N. Dec. at 522; see also, Matter of J-A-B, 27 I. & N. Dec. 168 (BIA 2017) (“The DHS’s
10 decision to commence removal proceedings involves the exercise of prosecutorial discretion, and 11 neither the Immigration Judges nor the Board may review a decision by the DHS to forgo
12 expedited removal proceedings or initiate removal proceedings in a particular case.”). Plaintiffs do
13 not dispute that DHS holds such discretion and even expressly acknowledge it in the complaint.
14 See Complaint, para. 73 (“Although most asylum seekers at the southern border lack valid entry
15 documents and are therefore eligible to be placed in expedited removal, it is well established that 16 the government has discretion to decline to initiate removal proceedings against any individual; to 17 determine which charges to bring in removal proceedings; and to place individuals amenable to 18 expedited removal in full removal proceedings instead.”)

19 Thus, defendants are correct that DHS undoubtedly has discretion to institute regular 20 removal proceedings even where subparagraph (b)(1) suggests it “shall order the alien removed.”
21 The flaw in defendants’ argument, however, is that DHS cannot, merely by placing an individual 22 otherwise subject to expedited removal into section 1229a regular removal proceedings instead,
23 somehow write out of existence the provision in subparagraph (b)(2) of section 1225 that the 24 contiguous territory return provision does not apply to persons to whom subparagraph (b)(1) does
25 apply. Exercising discretion to process an alien under section 1229a instead of expedited removal
26 under section 1225(b)(1) does not mean the alien is somehow also being processed under section 27 1225(b)(2).

28 DHS may choose which enforcement route it wishes to take—1225(b)(1) expedited removal, or 1229a regular removal—but it is not thereby making a choice as to whether

1 1125(b)(1) or 1125(b)(2) applies. The language of those provisions, not DHS, determines into 2 which of the two categories an alien falls.

3 The E-R-M- & L-R-M decision further illustrates this distinction. There, as discussed
4 above, the Board of Immigration Appeals held DHS has discretion to place aliens subject to 5 expedited removal under subparagraph (b)(1) into regular removal proceedings. Observing that 6 other aliens are entitled to regular removal under (b)(2), the Board found the express exclusion
7 from (b)(2) of aliens to whom (b)(1) applies means only that they are not entitled to regular 8 removal, not that the DHS lacks discretion to place them in it. 25 I. & N. Dec. at 523. Thus, the 9 decision recognizes that such persons remain among those to whom (b)(1) applies and who are 10 thereby excluded from treatment under (b)(2).

11 Defendants' second argument overlaps with their first. In light of the discretion DHS has to 12 place aliens eligible for expedited removal into section 1229a proceedings, defendants contend
13 subparagraph (b)(1) only "applies"—thereby triggering the exclusion from subparagraph (b)(2)— 14 when DHS elects actually to apply it to a particular alien. This argument is not supportable under 15 the statutory language. Subparagraph (b)(2) provides that it "shall not apply to an alien . . . to 16 whom paragraph (1) applies." The relevant inquiry therefore is whether the language of 17 subparagraph (b)(1) encompasses the alien, not whether DHS has decided to apply the provisions
18 of the subparagraph to him or her. Because there is no dispute the language of subparagraph (b)(1)
19 describes persons in the position of the individual plaintiffs, the exclusion from subparagraph 20 (b)(2) reaches them.

21 Finally, defendants make a statutory intent argument based on the circumstances under 22 which the contiguous return provision was originally enacted. Defendants assert the provision was 23 adopted by Congress as a direct response to the Board of Immigration Appeals decision in Matter
24 of Sanchez-Avila, 21 I. & N. Dec. 444 (BIA 1996). In Sanchez-Avila, the government argued it 25 had a long-standing and legal practice of, in some instances, "[r]equiring aliens to remain in 26 Mexico or Canada pending their exclusion proceedings." Id. at 450. The government noted that it 27 has "plenary power to preserve its dominion" and a "legal right to preserve the integrity of its 28

1 borders and ultimately its sovereignty.” Id. Accordingly, the government argued, “its exclusion
2 policy of requiring certain aliens to await their exclusion hearings in either Mexico or Canada”
3 was “a practical exercise of plenary power.” Id.

4 The Sanchez-Avila decision concluded that whatever “plenary power” the government
5 might otherwise have, it had not shown the alleged practice of returning aliens to Mexico (or 6 Canada) pending removal proceedings was “longstanding” with an “unchallenged history.” Id. at 7 465. Nor could the plaintiffs show there was “explicit statutory or regulatory authority for a
8 practice of returning applicants for admission at land border ports to Mexico or Canada 9 to await their hearings.” Id. As a result, the Board declined to treat the practice as valid. Id.

10 Defendants contend that because the contiguous territory return provision purportedly was 11 a direct Congressional response to Sanchez-Avila, it should be seen as authorizing the return of 12 aliens such as the named plaintiffs. The first and most fundamental problem with defendants’
13 argument, however, is that the plaintiff alien “returned” to Mexico in Sanchez-Avila was a resident 14 alien commuter whose application for entry was not granted given apparent grounds to exclude 15 him for “involvement with controlled substances.” Id. at 445. Thus, there is no indication he was 16 an undocumented applicant for admission subject to expedited removal under subparagraph (b)(1).
17 To the extent Congressional intent to supersede the result of Sanchez-Avila can be inferred, doing
18 so would not show Congress intended the contiguous territory return provision to apply to aliens 19 subject to subparagraph (b)(1).

20 Plaintiffs insist that, to the contrary, it is reasonable to assume Congress affirmatively
21 wished to exclude aliens subject to expedited removal from the contiguous territory return
22 provision. Plaintiffs suggest because refugees and asylum seekers are among those most likely to 23 lack proper admission documents and therefore be subject to expedited removal, it is perfectly
24 sensible that Congress would expressly exclude them from the contiguous territory return
25 provision.

26 The record supports no clear conclusion of any Congressional intent beyond that 27 implemented in the plain language of the statute. It is certainly possible that if squarely presented 28

1 with the question, Congress could and would choose to authorize DHS to impose contiguous
2 territory return on aliens subject to expedited removal, and that the appearance of the provision in 3 subparagraph (b)(2) was essentially a matter of poor drafting. It is also possible, however, that 4 Congress authorized contiguous return only for aliens not subject to expedited removal because 5 that was the particular issue presented by Sanchez-Avila and/or because there was no indication of 6 any pressing need to “return” persons during the presumably faster process of expedited
7 removal.¹¹ Given the unambiguous language and structure of the statute, speculation about 8 unexpressed Congressional intent does not advance the analysis.

9 Finally, the conclusion that plaintiffs and others similarly situated are not subject to the 10 contiguous territory return provision is neither irrational nor unfair. While at first blush it might 11 appear they thereby are in a better position than those who are not encompassed by section
12 1225(b)(1), any such perceived “advantage” flows only from the exercise of DHS’s prosecutorial
13 discretion. If persons in plaintiffs’ position should not be admitted to this country, DHS retains full 14 statutory authority to process them for expedited removal, and to detain them pending such 15 proceedings. Accordingly, plaintiffs have made a strong showing that they are likely to succeed on 16 the merits with respect to their claim that the MPP lacks a legal basis for applying the contiguous 17 territory return provision in this context.

18 19 3. Refoulement safeguards

20 Even if, contrary to the preceding discussion, the contiguous territory return provision

21
22 ¹¹ Even assuming plaintiffs are correct that persons subject to expedited removal are more likely 23 to be asylum seekers with credible fear of persecution if not admitted, that alone would not be a 24 basis to exclude them from contiguous territory return. If the statute were amended, or if the 25 statutory construction of this order were rejected on appeal, that concern would more appropriately 26 be addressed by adopting appropriate statutory and/or regulatory safeguards against 27 “refoulement,” rather than simply concluding contiguous territory return should never be applied
28 to such persons. It is also worth noting that an asylum seeker from some country other than Mexico will not automatically be at undue risk of persecution in Mexico, even if he or she can present an extremely compelling case of persecution in his or her country of origin.

1 could be lawfully applied to the individual plaintiffs and others like them, that does not
 2 end the inquiry. Defendants openly acknowledge they must comply with the government’s legal 3 obligations to avoid refoulement when removing aliens to a contiguous or any other territory
 4 pending conclusion of section 1229a proceedings. The United States is bound by the United 5 Nations 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees.¹² Article 33 of the Convention 6 provides:

7
 8 No Contracting State shall expel or return (“refouler”) a refugee in 9 any manner whatsoever to the frontiers of territories where his life
 10 or freedom would be threatened on account of his race, religion, 11 nationality, membership of a particular social group or political 12 opinion.

13
 14 The United States has codified at least some of its obligations under the Convention at 8
 15 U.S.C. §1231(b)(3). That section is entitled “Restriction on removal to a country where alien’s life 16 or freedom would be threatened,” and its provisions and the regulations thereunder provide for 17 hearings and reviews far beyond what is required by the MPP and implementing guidance. DHS 18 insists section 1231(b)(3) and its regulations do not apply here because it refers only to 19 circumstances where an alien is removed, as opposed to “returned.”

20
 21 Defendants’ argument ignores that the section is admittedly intended to implement the 22 United States’ obligations under the Convention, which expressly refer to “expel or return.”
 23 Additionally, while the record is not completely clear, there is a suggestion the prior statutory 24 language of “deport or return” was amended to substitute the term “remove” only as a result of the 25 consolidation of deportation and exclusion proceedings into unitary “removal” proceedings in 26 1996. If so, there would be no reason to infer the change was intended to make a substantive 27 alteration to the government’s obligations to avoid refoulement.

28 That said, it is not clear that defendants would be obligated to provide the full panoply of ¹² The United States is not a direct party to the Convention, but is a party to the 1967 Protocol Relating to the Status of Refugees, which incorporates Articles 2-34 of the Convention.

1 procedural and substantive protections prescribed under §1231(b)(3) and its implementing
2 regulations, even assuming the individual plaintiffs are subject to “return” under the contiguous
3 territory return provision. First, as noted above and as reflected generally in subdivision (b) of 4 §1231, the potential issues relating to sending an alien to a contiguous territory as opposed to his
5 or her “home” country may not be identical. Moreover, in this action plaintiffs are not contending 6 the protections against refoulement provided under subparagraph (b)(1) of section 1225 for those 7 placed in expedited return are insufficient. Those restrictions are quite clearly less restrictive than 8 are required under §1231(b)(3).

9 Second, even though plaintiffs are not contending that DHS must place them in expedited
10 removal, all their arguments depend on the fact that the expedited removal statute applies to them, 11 absent prosecutorial discretion. Thus, it would be anomalous to conclude that they necessarily are 12 entitled to greater procedural and substantive protections against refoulement—i.e., those 13 prescribed by §1231(b)(3)—upon temporary “return” to Mexico than they would receive if the 14 government instead elected simply to remove them permanently on an expedited basis.

15 Accordingly, to the extent plaintiffs contend section §1231(b)(3) applies to persons being 16 “returned” under the contiguous territory return provision, they have not shown they are more 17 likely than not to succeed on the merits of such an argument. That, however, does not answer the 18 question of whether the MPP includes sufficient safeguards against refoulement.

19 At the preliminary injunction stage, it is neither possible nor necessary to determine what 20 the minimal anti-refoulement procedures might be. Plaintiffs have established that persons placed 21 in expedited removal proceedings, and persons who ultimately are found removable under section
22 1229a, all benefit from protections not extended to the individual plaintiffs here. The issue in this 23 case is only whether the MPP’s protections for persons like the individual plaintiffs comply with 24 the law. Even assuming neither §1231(b)(3) nor the more limited procedures under expedited
25 removal apply, plaintiffs have shown they are more likely than not to prevail on the merits of their 26 contention that defendants adopted the MPP without sufficient regard to refoulement issues.
27 Notably, the CIS Policy Memorandum, AR 2273 n.5, expressly acknowledges the government’s 28

1 obligations “vis-à-vis the 1951 Convention and 1967 Protocol are reflected in Section
2 241(b)(3)(B).” The subsequent conclusion of that memo that “the reference to Section
3 241(b)(3)(B) should not be construed to suggest that Section 241(b)(3)(B) applies to MPP,” may 4 ultimately be supportable. It leaves open, however, the question of what the government’s 5 obligations are.

6 As noted above, the MPP provides only for review of potential refoulement concerns when 7 an alien “affirmatively” raises the point. Access to counsel is “currently” not available. AR 2273.
8 While an CIS officer’s determination is subject to review by a supervisory asylum officer, no
9 administrative review proceedings are available. AR 2274. These procedures undeniably provide 10 less protection than prior legislative and administrative rulemaking procedures have concluded is 11 appropriate upon removal, either expedited or regular. While it might be rational to treat “return” 12 differently, the rules must be adopted in conformance with administrative law and with 13 governments anti-refoulement obligations. Without opining as to what minimal process might be 14 required, plaintiffs’ showing on this point suffices.

15
16 4. Plaintiffs’ specific claims for relief

17 The first claim for relief set out in the complaint asserts the MPP is “contrary to law”
18 because the contiguous return provision does not apply to persons in the position of the individual 19 plaintiffs. As set out above, plaintiffs have the better argument on this point.

20 Plaintiffs’ second claim for relief asserts that under 5 U.S.C. § 553(b) and (c), defendants
21 may not adopt a “rule” without providing notice and an opportunity for comment. If it were the 22 case that the MPP represents a lawful exercise of DHS’s discretion to implement the contiguous 23 territory return provision, plaintiffs would have no tenable “notice and comment” claim regarding 24 that exercise of prosecutorial discretion.

25 Additionally, even given the conclusion above that the contiguous return provision does 26 not provide a legal basis for the MPP, the issue does not rise to a violation of the notice and 27 comment provisions under the APA. Rather, plaintiffs’ claim for relief with respect to notice and 28

1 comment is implicated if, and only if, they are subject to the contiguous territory return provision,
 2 notwithstanding the discussion above. In that instance, the question would be whether the 3 defendants were obligated to comply with APA notice and comment rules with respect to adopting
 4 procedures to address refoulement concerns. Plaintiffs’ complaint appears to recognize this point,
 5 and focuses on the allegation that the MPP procedures for addressing an alien’s risk of persecution
 6 upon return to Mexico were not adopted after notice and comment.

7 If defendants simply were to proceed by applying the existing procedures and regulations
 8 of §1231(b)(3) to temporary “returns” under the contiguous territory return provision, they might 9 have a good argument that no “notice and comment” procedure would be required. If, however,
 10 defendants take the position—which may be completely reasonable—that a different set of 11 procedures should apply to contiguous territory “returns,” compliance with APA notice and 12 comment procedures more likely than not would be required. Accordingly, plaintiffs have shown 13 they have a likelihood of success on the merits of their notice and comment claim.

14 The third claim for relief set out in the complaint alleges, in essence, that the adoption of 15 the MPP was arbitrary and capricious as a whole, and that it effectively “deprives asylum seekers
 16 of a meaningful right to apply for asylum.” The sixth claim for relief, which may be duplicative, 17 also asserts impairment of the right to seek asylum. At this juncture, it is not necessary to 18 determine whether plaintiffs might be able to prove such broader and/or “catch-all” claims.

19 Finally, the fourth claim for relief¹³ avers the MPP is contrary to law because it has 20 inadequate provisions to protect against refoulement. The claim invokes the UN Convention, the 21 Protocols, section 1231(b)(3), and its implementing regulations. As discussed above, plaintiffs 22 have not shown they are likely to prove section 1231(b)(3) applies directly. Their claims about 23 refoulement nevertheless likely merge with their “notice and comment” and/or catch-all claims
 24 under the second and third claims for relief. Thus, in the event DHS has statutory authority to 25

26

27 ¹³ As noted above, the present motion does not address the fifth claim for relief, which is not 28 grounded in the APA.

1 apply the contiguous return provision to plaintiffs and others in their position, plaintiffs have 2 shown a likelihood of success on the refoulement issue, whether that is best characterized as a
3 claim under their second, third, or fourth claims for relief, or some combination thereof.
4

5 C. Other injunction factors

6 Under the familiar standards, plaintiffs who demonstrate a likelihood of success on the 7 merits, as plaintiffs have done here, must also show they are “likely to suffer irreparable harm in 8 the absence of preliminary relief, that the balance of equities tips in [their] favor, and that an 9 injunction is in the public interest.” Winter, 555 U.S. at 21-22. While the precise degree of risk
10 and specific harms that plaintiffs might suffer in this case may be debatable, there is no real 11 question that it includes the possibility of irreparable injury, sufficient to support interim relief in 12 light of the showing on the merits.

13 The individual plaintiffs present uncontested evidence that they fled their homes in El 14 Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras to escape extreme violence, including rape and death threats.
15 One plaintiff alleges she was forced to flee Honduras after her life was threatened for being a 16 lesbian. Another contends he suffered beatings and death threats by a “death squad” in Guatemala
17 that targeted him for his indigenous identity. Plaintiffs contend they have continued to experience
18 physical and verbal assaults, and live in fear of future violence, in Mexico.

19 Defendants attempt to rebut the plaintiffs’ showing of harm by arguing the merits—20 contending the individual plaintiffs were all “processed consistent[ly] with applicable law” and 21 had sufficient opportunity to assert any legitimate fears of return to Mexico. As reflected in the 22 discussion above, however, plaintiffs have made a strong showing that defendants’ view of the 23 law on those points is not correct. The organizational plaintiffs have also shown a likelihood of 24 harm in terms of impairment of their ability to carry out their core mission of providing 25 representation to aliens seeking admission, including asylum seekers. Cf. East Bay Sanctuary, 909
26 F.3d at 1242 (describing cognizable harms to organizational plaintiffs for standing purposes.)

27 Finally, the balance of equities and the public interest support issuance of preliminary 28

1 relief. As observed in East Bay Sanctuary:

2 the public has a “weighty” interest “in efficient administration of the 3 immigration laws at the border.” Landon v. Plasencia, 459 U.S. 21, 4 34, 103 S.Ct. 321, 74 L.Ed.2d 21 (1982). But the public also has an 5 interest in ensuring that “statutes enacted by [their] representatives”
6 are not imperiled by executive fiat. Maryland v. King, 567 U.S.
7 1301, 1301, 133 S.Ct. 1, 183 L.Ed.2d 667 (2012) (Roberts, C.J., in 8 chambers).

9 909 F.3d at 1255. Additionally, similar to the situation in East Bay Sanctuary, while this 10 injunction will bring a halt to a current and expanding policy, and in that sense technically does 11 not preserve the “status quo,” it will only “temporarily restore[] the law to what it had been for 12 many years prior.” Id.

13 D. Scope of injunction

14 Defendants urge that any injunction be limited in geographical scope. As the East Bay
15 Sanctuary court recently observed, there is “a growing uncertainty about the propriety of universal 16 injunctions.” 909 F.3d at 1255.

17 Nevertheless, as East Bay Sanctuary also noted:

18 In immigration matters, we have consistently recognized the 19 authority of district courts to enjoin unlawful policies on a universal 20 basis. Regents of the Univ. of Cal. v. U.S. Dep’t of Homeland Sec., 21 908 F.3d 476, 511 (9th Cir. 2018) (“A final principle is also 22 relevant: the need for uniformity in immigration policy.”); Hawaii v.
23 Trump, 878 F.3d 662, 701 (9th Cir. 2017), rev’d on other grounds, –
24 – U.S. —, 138 S. Ct. 2392, 201 L.Ed.2d 775 (2018) (“Because this 25 case implicates immigration policy, a nationwide injunction was 26 necessary to give Plaintiffs a full expression of their rights.”);
27 Washington [v. Trump], 847 F.3d [1151 (9th Cir. 2017) at 1166–67 28 (“[A] fragmented immigration policy would run afoul of the constitutional and statutory requirement for uniform immigration law and policy.” (citing Texas v. U.S., 809 F.3d 134, 187–88 (5th Cir. 2015))). “Such relief is commonplace in APA cases, promotes uniformity in immigration enforcement, and is necessary to provide the plaintiffs here with complete redress.” Univ. of Cal., 908 F.3d at 512.

1 Id. Although issues sometimes arise when a ruling in a single judicial district is applied
 2 nationwide, defendants have not shown the injunction in this case can be limited geographically.
 3 This is not a case implicating local concerns or values. There is no apparent reason that any of the 4 places to which the MPP might ultimately be extended have interests that materially differ from 5 those presented in San Ysidro. Accordingly, the injunction will not be geographically limited.¹⁴

6
 7 E. Bond and stay issues

8 No party has suggested that it would be appropriate to condition issuance of a preliminary 9 injunction upon the posting of a bond under the circumstances of this case. No bond will be 10 required.¹⁵ At argument, defendants moved orally for a stay pending appeal of any injunctive relief
 11 that might issue. Defendants contend the MPP was adopted to address certain aspects of a crisis.
 12 Even fully crediting defendants' characterization of the circumstances, they have not shown that a 13 stay of this injunction is warranted. See East Bay Sanctuary, 909 F.3d at 1255. Accordingly, the 14 request for a stay during the pendency of appeal will be denied. To permit defendants to exercise
 15 their right to seek a stay from the Court of Appeal, however, this order will not take effect until 16 5:00 p.m., PST, April 12, 2019.

17
 18 _____
 19 ¹⁴ While the injunction precludes the "return" under the MPP of any additional aliens who would 20 otherwise be subject to expedited removal, nothing in the order determines if any individuals,
 21 other than those appearing as plaintiffs in this action, should be offered the opportunity to re-enter 22 the United States pending conclusion of their section 1229a proceedings. Nor does anything in the injunctive relief require that any person be paroled into the country during such proceedings. DHS will have discretion to detain the individual plaintiffs and others when they are allowed back across the border.

23 ¹⁵ On its face, Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 65(c) permits a court to grant preliminary 24 injunctive relief "only if the movant gives security in an amount that the court considers proper to 25 pay the costs and damages sustained by any party found to have been wrongfully enjoined or 26 restrained." The Ninth Circuit has made clear, however, that "[d]espite the seemingly mandatory
 27 language, Rule 65(c) invests the district court with discretion as to the amount of security required, 28 if any." Johnson v. Couturier, 572 F.3d 1067, 1086 (9th Cir. 2009) (citations and quotations omitted, emphasis in original). This is not a case where a bond would serve to protect against quantifiable harm in any event.

V. CONCLUSION

Plaintiffs’ motion for a preliminary injunction is granted. Defendants are hereby enjoined and restrained from continuing to implement or expand the “Migrant Protection Protocols” as announced in the January 25, 2018 DHS policy memorandum and as explicated in further agency memoranda. Within 2 days of the effective date of this order, defendants shall permit the named individual plaintiffs to enter the United States. At defendants’ option, any named plaintiff appearing at the border for admission pursuant to this order may be detained or paroled, pending adjudication of his or her admission application.

This order shall take effect at 5:00 p.m., PST, April 12, 2012.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Dated: April 8, 2019

RICHARD SEEBORG
United States District Judge

United States District Court
Northern District of California

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28