Mother, Immigrant, Criminal - Study of Discourse in the Media

This is a very interesting study of how the media constructed Elvira Arellano's identity depending on the media's demographics. It is a lesson in framing the issues and what needs to be addressed depending on the demographics. This study also shows that preaching to the choir is ineffective.

o haven't heard (which seems to be most people), there was a huge protest, a la Dream 9 from Texas, but here in San Diego this 100 people, organized by the same folks that did the Texas protest, converged at the port of entry here in San Diego on Tuesday. This dozens of deported aliens and some that crossed into Tijuana for the event, meaning they essentially self-deported, who then requested San Diego chapter was not advised (at least not in any official capacity) prior to the event, and we were essentially scrambling for information the day prior to it. Not that our chapter would have necessarily supported it (although some individual attorneys may have), but it seems odd that the organizers would not have given us the heads up. Perhaps they are not fans of AILA, but it still seems like it would have been to the benefit of the aliens to have the immigration bar in town aware of the event, and aware of dozens of unrepresented aliens being detained and trying to apply for asylum.

My biggest gripe is that ICE decided to move dozens of detained aliens, some who had been waiting for credible fear interviews for weeks, out of the local facility, CCA-Otay, to "accommodate" the protesters. The protesters are being given expedited CFIs, jumping ahead of the line, while the detainees already there, including at least 2 of my clients, had to deal with the stress of being shipped to Arizona and extending their overall detention time. I was told their transfer is temporary, but that gives me little comfort. I am not pleased.

Q: I can't start a new thread.

A: Some sub-forums are closed and kept for historical purposes.

Q: I can't delete my post.

A: If your post is the one that started the thread, you may not delete it. Please contact the moderator for your forum to assist.
