Re: Reopen the federal government without poison pill policy proposals

Dear Majority Leader McConnell and Leader Schumer:

We, the undersigned organizations, write to ask you to reject the Trump-McConnell “End the Shutdown and Secure the Border Act” and to reopen the government immediately instead of holding federal workers hostage for extreme immigration proposals. This bill includes many poison pills designed to dramatically expand immigration enforcement, while banning Central American children from accessing asylum and worsening the status quo for individuals with Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) and Temporary Protected Status (TPS) protections. It is in no way a good faith, bipartisan effort to resolve the current government shutdown. We therefore urge you to pass H.R. 268, the Supplemental Appropriations Act of 2019, given the Senate passed a similar bill in the previous Congress.

Instead of compromising, the Trump-McConnell bill adds to the Trump Administration’s demand that wastes billions of taxpayer dollars on an unnecessary, excessive wall and unjustified enforcement and further shuts the door to those seeking refuge in the U.S. This bill includes $5.7 billion taxpayer dollars for the border wall without a clear plan for construction or an accounting of the possible damage to the environment, local communities and tribal nations. In addition, the bill includes funding to hire 750 more Border Patrol agents and 2,000 more ICE agents, as well as a 20% increase to ICE detention and removals to allow ICE to jail an average of 52,000 people per day. At a time when border crossings are at historic lows, this dramatic increase in immigration enforcement is wasteful and harmful to communities across the United States.

Under the guise of “protecting” children, this bill overturns existing asylum law to double down on policies that endanger children’s health and safety. This bill establishes a sham Central American Minors program that forces children to apply for asylum outside of the U.S., allows only those with a qualifying relative in the U.S. to apply--shutting out those fleeing persecution without certain family ties in the U.S.--caps the number of asylum grants at 15,000 a year (regardless of the danger facing individual applicants,) only allows admissions under the CAM program if it is in “the national interest,” and eliminates access to judicial review. It gives the administration up to 8 months to implement the program, but in the interim would immediately ban Central American children from applying for asylum at the border barring thousands of children from obtaining any asylum relief.

Furthermore, the bill overturns a key provision of the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act, a true bipartisan compromise informed by child welfare experts, to make all Central American unaccompanied children arriving the border subject to expedited deportations without court review. Eliminating due process makes it difficult for children to navigate a complicated legal process and puts them at risk for return back to life-threatening circumstances. Imagine a ten-year-old child, arriving alone and scared, being given only one shot to articulate to an immigration officer the history of violence she is fleeing, and facing deportation if she cannot. That's what this bill does: rather than keep children safe, these provisions will make it harder for children to access life-saving protection and result in many being returned to harm. In addition, this bill also makes fewer people eligible for asylum by making it harder for immigration judges to hear asylum cases and limiting judicial review among other provisions. This bill turns our back on international obligations and our values.

The supposed "compromise" in this bill to protect immigrant youth and TPS holders is a Trojan horse that actually protects fewer people than those currently protected by court orders. This proposal only allows those with current DACA to apply for temporary relief. And even then, the bill includes many new restrictions that were not in the DACA or TPS programs, meaning that fewer people than currently hold the statuses are likely to qualify. It eviscerates the TPS program going forward, leaving people stranded in the United States with no avenue for relief to protect against forced return to deadly circumstances caused by natural disaster or war. The bill only protects individuals with TPS from Honduras, Nicaragua, El Salvador and Haiti. It does not include those with Deferred Enforced Departure (DED) from Liberia or those with TPS from Guinea, Sierra Leone, Nepal, Sudan, South Sudan, Yemen, Somalia and Syria, who have lost or may soon lose protections. This bait and switch actually worsens the status quo and fails to provide permanent protections from deportation for our family members, neighbors and community leaders who have had lawful presence in the U.S. for many years.

Finally, the bill includes $563 million in funding for the immigration court that would enable the hiring of 75 more immigration judge teams. But the bill does not include any reforms necessary to improve the court's ability to ensure due process and the fair and efficient review of all cases. Reforms are vital to reduce the ballooning 800,000 case backlog that the Trump administration has made worse by restricting judges' authority to control their own dockets and reopening 350,000 low priority cases previously removed from dockets.

In conclusion, we urge you to reject the "End the Shutdown and Secure the Border" Act. This bill is an extreme, enforcement-heavy approach that pays lip service to providing relief to immigrant communities. It is not a good faith effort to negotiate on immigration policy. After nearly a month of a painful government shutdown, we ask that you pass H.R. 268 and immediately open the government without these poison pills.

Signed,
