

July 20, 2015

Dear Members of Congress,

We, the undersigned civil rights, immigrant rights, victims' services, and human rights organizations write to express our strong opposition to any legislation that would seek to undermine state and local law enforcement's efforts to build and restore community trust.

Good policies are made over time, by examining our shared values and opinions, and by working toward equality and justice for all people. They are not made based on a single, tragic incident or by taking the actions of one individual to justify a policy that criminalizes an entire community. Sadly, in response to the tragic death of Kathryn Steinle, some politicians, including Senator David Vitter, are proposing legislation that scapegoats all immigrants based on the acts of one. These reactionary policy proposals are focused on heavy-handed, enforcement-only approaches despite the fact that studies show that deportation-only policies do not reduce crime rates. Rather, those policies only foster an atmosphere of mistrust and fear, and undermine public safety in all of our communities.

Such proposals are not even supported by the federal agency they are purportedly aimed at helping – the Department of Homeland Security (DHS). As DHS Secretary Jeh Johnson himself acknowledged in a July 14, 2015 hearing before the House Judiciary Committee, “I do not believe that mandating through federal legislation conduct of sheriffs and police chiefs is the way to go. I think it will [be] hugely controversial. I think it will have problems with the Constitution.” Secretary Johnson also confirmed he is not alone in this belief, when he testified, “In my judgment, and the judgment of a lot of other border security, immigration enforcement experts, the way to most effectively work with these jurisdictions, again, is a cooperative one, not by hitting them over the head with federal legislation that will engender a lot more litigation.”<sup>1</sup>

Policies like those introduced by Senator Vitter would undermine trust between local and state law enforcement and the communities they serve to protect. Over 320 localities in diverse geographic regions such as Kansas, California, Florida, Illinois, Pennsylvania and many other states have limited their involvement in immigration enforcement because of concerns about liability for failure to uphold Fourth Amendment protections and concerns that such involvement undermines community trust in the police, a critical component to effective policing.

States and localities should be permitted to pursue policies that foster trust and cooperation with their local communities. If victims and witnesses are afraid to come forward and work with the police, the police simply cannot do their jobs.<sup>2</sup> Moreover, as confirmed by a July 2015 report by the American Immigration Council, increased immigration to the United States has in fact

<sup>2</sup> A 2013 study found that 44 percent of Latinos surveyed reported being less likely to contact police officers if they have been a victim of crime because they fear that such contact could provide an opportunity for police officers to inquire into their immigration status or that of a person they know. coincided with a significant decrease in both violent and property crimes nationwide.<sup>3</sup> We know that the majority of the immigrant population comes to this country to reunite with family, work and make meaningful contributions that enrich their communities. What we need is a long-term Congressional solution aimed at addressing our broken immigration system, not reactionary policy proposals that focus on only one facet of the system.

The dialogue surrounding this tragic event only fosters stereotypes and misinformation about the immigrant community. To be clear – the immigration system is broken and needs reform. But moving forward with reactionary and sweeping legislation on one facet of the system doesn't solve the problem. The real solution to our immigration challenges is broad and humane immigration reform which would place undocumented immigrants on a workable and earned path to citizenship, thereby allowing them to contribute even more to their families, communities, and our country.

Sincerely,
